it's about

it's about waking up at six on a Saturday morning (weren't those meant for sleeping in?), lacing on a pair of tennis shoes, and splashing cold water on your face. You step outside and subject yourself to a grueling five-mile run just to stay competitive during the off-season. it's about sitting at the computer in an essay-induced trance for hours with a paper due the next day (let's hear it for procrastination!). The next morning, you hope your teacher sees your creativity (but it's hard to see anything at 7:30 in the morning). it's about working at the video store on the night of Homecoming and seeing half of the senior class come through to get movies. Now you have concrete proof that you're not the only one who doesn't enjoy dances. You rejoice when your nagging friends finally realize their assumption that "everyone goes" is horribly inaccurate. it's about the parched feeling in your mouth (thirst seems a woefully inadequate description). Just then your coach hollers, "Run!" and a wave of motivation surges through your entire body. it's about venturing downtown with a group of friends and getting lost (face it, following a person who runs all the red lights isn't the easiest thing to do). Upon your arrival, you and your buds get a sampling of all there is to experience: food, fun, and the entertainment of LoDo. it's about feeling adrenaline coursing through your body as you stand up to perform for 30 people you barely know (this one counts-you've got to do your best). Palms sweaty, hands shaking, you bow your head, take a deep breath, and begin to deliver your cutting. it's about meticulously finalizing the glittering blue "GO CHS!" on your flushed cheek as your best friend waits outside. School pride fills your veins as you walk into the stadium of the big game and join the excited faces of your classmates to witness another Rebel victory. it's about expression, discipline, experience, spirit, dedication, guts, and order.

It's about meeting downtown at midnight for a cappuccino at Paris on the Platte, or racing to your after-school job to spend six hours cleaning tables (hey, at least you can now afford to take your girlfriend out this weekend). It's about going down to Foley's and shelling out $45 to spend a night a few feet from the Dave Matthews Band. It's about taking your shirt off in freezing weather (who cares about getting sick anyway?) and painting a blue and silver "C" on your chest for the Homecoming game. It's about riding a mountain bike with every muscle in your body crying for you to stop, but your thoughts lie on the top of the mountain. It's about skipping a party with friends to spend the night at a hospital doing grunt work that your mom would have to beg you to do at home. All of these passions, commitments, drives, and desires make Columbine students an eclectic mix. It's about being an individual and not having to fit into a certain clique. it's about expression.

Intense

Thrill seeking is an activity that is driven by one simple desire. In order to seek thrills, a person only has to crave an intense sensation. What could cause a person to want to feel a sudden, extreme feeling? Is it the peril involved in cliff jumping? Or could it be the excitement of bungee jumping or sky diving? Senior Letisha Richardson sought the thrill of getting a tattoo. Accompanied by her mother and her best friend, Senior Katie Rutledge, Ticia headed to Colfax Avenue and anxiously awaited her moment of thrill...

The whole trip there appears to be just another car ride until the word "tattoo" is mentioned by Ticia's mother. Mom: What kind of tattoo are you getting, Ticia? Ticia: It is like an Arabic design with a diamond. On the four corners are flowers. Mom: Is it just going to be black and white? Ticia: No. It is going to have a black outline. The flowers are going to be purple, blue, and green. Katie: It looks really cool.

Ticia and Katie already picked this location to receive the tattoo. The excitement builds as Ticia gets out of the car. She walks in and has to wait for Jo to finish cleaning up from her last appointment.

Looking around, there are showcases of earrings, tongue rings, and belly rings- any ring wanted for a body piercing is located here. Jo comes over and hands Ticia a clipboard with a form for her to fill out and for her mother to sign because she is 17 years old. Ticia: Where's my mom? Mom: Honey, you are going to have to fill out my part of the form and then I will sign. Ticia: It's already filled out. Just sign there. I was going to get an arm band, but I heard it hurts too bad. I'm excited for mine, though. Mom: Ticia's mom starts to look at Jo's scrapbook. She has good work. Look at that. Katie: She points. Look at that! Mom: Oh my God, that's got to be painful. This is beautiful. Sorry Jo, we're crowding you here. Jo: No problem. Ticia: Look, Mom, here's mine. Mine is going to be laying that way though. Mom: Have you decided where you are going to get it? Ticia: Yeah, on my back.

Ticia, Katie, and Ticia's mom walk into Jo's room. Ticia: Have people cried before? Jo: It is not really that kind of pain. Ticia: Really? Jo: Yes, I've had someone cry, but it is really not that

RISK

... common. It's an awkward feeling, if anything else. I'm sure you've had worse pain. Ticia: Okay. Mom: Oh, darn! Ticia: Let me cry now. The nervousness is building now. Jo: Why don't you sit in the chair and then we'll be ready to go. Ticia: Okay. Mom: Are you ready? Ticia: Yeah, are you ready? Mom: Oh, yeah! Jo: Okay. Come on over here, unbutton, and pull your shorts down. Why don't you go ahead and drop your shorts down to your butt because you do want it straight. Ticia: In terror. Oh!! Jo: It won't but hurt for a minute. We're still getting ready here. I'm not gonna jab you yet. Ticia: Now do you start on the spine or do you start off to the side? Jo: Either way.

After the transfer is put on, Ticia goes to a mirror in another room to make sure that it is how she wants it. After all, it is permanent. She comes back and shows her mom and Katie. They give the okay. Jo tells Ticia to sit upright in a chair in front of her with her shorts low while she prepares the ink and the needle. Ticia's nerves have fully kicked in. Jo: Here's the deal. If you feel you're not sure, I can do one line first with no ink. I'm not going to do one line with ink and then find out you can't take it. Ticia: It's not that I can't take it. Mom: It's just nervousness. Jo: I'm going to start at the bottom and work

Ticia: It feels like a bee sting. Mom: A really, really bad bee sting. Ticia: It's like when I got attacked by bees. Katie: But you're not allergic to this. Mom: If you can do this, you can definitely make it through eight weeks of hell in the Navy. Ticia: I love you guys. Mom: I'm proud of you for going through with this. Katie: Me too. Jo: Keep in mind, I want you to hold real still.

While Jo is doing the tattoo, Katie and her mom try to take her mind off of it. They talk about anything and everything. Mom: Why did you decide to do this? Ticia: Just to say that I've done it. I'm at a time in my life where I think I need art on my body. I think if I can handle this for forty five minutes, I can handle the Navy for eight and one-half weeks. Mom: And your future, not only the eight and one-half weeks. Ticia's

Thanks.

Ticia waits anxiously for the tattoo to be done. She had been sitting patiently for 45 minutes. The tattoo itself is bright red and swelling out of the skin. There is no blood. By now, Ticia can not feel most of the pain. The tattoo is now done. Jo wipes off all the ink and cleans the area. She sprays it with water. Ticia gets up to look at the tattoo in the other room. Her mother and Katie go with her. Ticia: What do you think? Katie: That is awesome. Mom: It is so beautiful. What do you think? Ticia: I love it. Mom: Does it still hurt? Ticia: Yeah, a little bit. Katie: It's not as bad as before, though.

COMMITMENTS

Have you ever heard of teenagers being stereotyped as irresponsible? Most of us have received this dreaded label at one time or another. Despite this stereotype, students have homework, chores, jobs, and a million other things that we are responsible for. Some teenagers even manage to fit volunteering into their hectic schedules. Illustrating this, Sophomores Shannon Eberly and Robyn Sarafin gave up their Friday afternoon to volunteer at the Jeffco Action Center for an hour. Jeffco Action Center is an establishment that helps the needy by handing out food, clothing, and other necessities. To find out their assignment for the afternoon, Shannon and Robyn spoke to Tina Campbell, one of the volunteer coordinators there. Here is how the afternoon went...

Tina: Hi, I'm the volunteer coordinator. You came to give us some help, right? Robyn: Yeah. Shannon and Robyn seem a little nervous about volunteering because they are not sure what is expected of them. Tina: All right, well, let's go back here. Shannon and Robyn follow Tina to the back area where they will be working. They discover that they will be working in a small room on a very long table. There are piles of clothing, stacks of books, and various other items scattered around the room. Tina: What I thought I'd ask you to do, if you don't mind, is all of these boxes have paperback books in them. What we want to do is to take them out and sort them according to type of book. What you need to do next is open up each one of these boxes, and then what I'll have you do is separate the contents, and then I'll find a box for us to put this stuff in. The boxes that they will be sorting also contain personal hygiene products, coupons, and advertisements. Tina leaves the room and Shannon and Robyn start to work. Shannon takes the initiative to complete both tasks within the hour.

Shannon: We'll just do one job at a time because it will go faster with two people working. Robyn is much more relaxed, but it is obvious that she also wants to finish their jobs. Robyn is curious about how long they are planning to volunteer. Robyn: Okay. We're doing this for an hour? Shannon seems to be annoyed with Robyn's question and the fact that she has not begun to work yet. To Shannon, an hour doesn't seem like enough time to finish everything, but Robyn feels that they will easily finish in time. Shannon: Robyn, that's not very long. Robyn is now ready to work. Robyn: I was just

Priorities

...making sure.

Shannon: Obviously ready to get started. Okay, watch out! I've done this at my grandma's school before. I put this in the middle, right here? Robyn: Yeah. Referring to a sample size package of cough syrup. Those are funny little value packs!

Shannon: Picking up an advertisement. Here is one of those scratch things. Robyn is still entertained by the cough syrup packages. Robyn: I love these little packs! They are sticking together. Shannon has not been paying much attention to Robyn and is attempting to keep all of the items arranged neatly. She is picking up ads and throwing them away. Shannon: Throw away all of these sweepstakes. Robyn: There are a lot of these scratch things. Are you scratching them? Shannon: Of course! Five dollars off long-distance. Robyn: We need to find a ten dollar one.

The excitement of the scratch advertisements wears off and they go back to sorting. Shannon: Okay... Where did she say these books were from? Robyn doesn't know the answer to Shannon's question, so she tries to avoid answering it. Robyn: Where they are from? Shannon: Yeah. Tell me where she got them from. Robyn decides to tell Shannon the truth. Robyn: I don't know.

A little while later, Shannon and Robyn are opening the boxes of personal hygiene products and sorting them. Robyn: Can I have another box? Shannon: Yeah. Robyn: Thanks! These boxes are for guys. Aren't there any for girls? Shannon: Probably, but we're not doing them. She picks up an advertisement from one of the boxes and stares at it. Oh, wow! It's an optical illusion! It's an eye. I'm good at those. Robyn is skeptically looking at Shannon. Robyn: That's an eye? Shannon: It's an eye. Robyn: You can hardly even tell it's an eye. Shannon: You can tell!

Robyn is getting upset with their sorting. Robyn: This is all making one little big pile! Shannon: One little big pile? Hmm...

Several minutes later: Robyn: I need another box. Shannon: One moment please. Two more boxes and we're done! Robyn: Is that all we need to do? Shannon: No, Robyn. Robyn: I want to do the last one. Shannon: Does the lady want this organized or not?

After sorting the personal hygiene products, Shannon and Robyn begin to put the items in boxes. Shannon is attempting to fold the box flaps of the full boxes so they overlap and keep the box closed. Trying to figure out how to close the boxes was a difficult task. Robyn seems to be more skilled at this task than Shannon. Shannon: How do you do that? She can't close the box. Fix my box. I have problems with that. Robyn: I'm going to beat this box up! They begin to sort the books, and put them into labeled boxes. Here, give me the marker. I need the marker. Robyn has acquired the marker and is twirling

...it around, threatening to mark on Shannon. Shannon: That's permanent. If this gets on my clothes, you're buying me new ones! Shannon's eyes get large at the thought of ruining her clothing.

Robyn: Okay. What are you doing? Robyn is outraged at Shannon's method of labeling and attempts to take over. You don't know how to do this. Shannon replies as if defending herself. Shannon: I know how to do this! I'll label this one "books." What is this one? Shannon points to a box across the table. She continues to label boxes despite Robyn's protests. Robyn loses interest in Shannon's labeling and goes back to sorting books. Robyn: It's the chapter books. Shannon: Pointing to a different box. What is this one? Robyn: I don't know. I think it's also the chapter books. Shannon: Yeah, but what grade level? Robyn: Three-four. Shannon is looking at another box of books, trying to decipher what it consists of. Shannon: What is this? Robyn: Jokes. Shannon: Activities? Robyn: All right.

Tina comes back in to see how Shannon and Robyn are doing. Tina: How's it coming with the books and all? Shannon takes control of the situation by answering Tina's questions as accurately as she can. Shannon: Good. We have half-full boxes. She points to a box of shaving cream, looking a little concerned that everything didn't fit into one box. This box, we couldn't fit any more in here, so we put it in here. She shows Tina how they have organized the various items. Tina: Okay. Shannon: Pointing to various boxes. This one is all full and these are all full and we're just folding the boxes shut now. Tina: All right, well that's good. We can stack them back together. Tina is observing their work, appearing pleased with their accomplishments. Well, thank you very much! We appreciate the work. Keep us in mind if you ever want to do anything like this again. Shannon: All right. Thanks.

Shannon and Robyn left after volunteering for an hour. Through donating their time, they managed to help those in need get ready for going back to school. They are an example of responsible teenagers at Columbine, and they managed to show several people that not all teenagers are irresponsible.

Relief

At one time or another, we've all been completely overwhelmed with school, sports, friends, or a combination of the three. When this happens, we all say the same thing: "I need an outlet from stress. What can I do to get away from it all?" Do you sit on the couch for a few hours and do nothing at all except watch TV? Or do you go to Juice Stop and buy your favorite of the 29 different drinks? To relieve their stress, Senior Kelly Brown and Juniors Kevin Forslund and Jon Cohen went to LoDo to "get away from it all." Here is how the evening went...

Jon: Where do I want to park? Kelli: I don't know. You're driving!

Jon: I don't know where I'm going! I am so lost! This is not the only time they get lost during the trip. Getting lost becomes as routine as going to school. Kevin: We're going to spend the whole time in the car. We're not really going to get out. We're just going to spend the time in the car! That could be interesting. Jon: We could go drive through somewhere. We have ten bucks. Kelli: Actually guys, we have 30 bucks between us! Kevin: Wow! We could get together and buy something cool. How much can you buy with 30 dollars? Kelli: Oh, yeah! So we could have like time shares! You can have it for a week, then I'll take it for a week!

They begin looking for parking- an interesting experience. Kevin: Pull in. Right there, right there! Kelli: Three dollars, we can do that. Kevin: Pay here. What? Are we supposed to pay the pole, or what? They try to figure out where to pay; that's an adventure in itself. Jon: What the heck? This isn't right. Kelli: Private parking only. Monday through Friday. Violators will be towed and/or ticketed.

While walking through OctoberFest, they encounter interesting street performers. Robot Dude is the most unique of the street performers. He has wires running from both of his hands up to his neck. He has stiff, rigid movements, just like a robot. He also talks low and monotone, imitating a robot's voice. Robot Dude: Pleased to meet you! Take me to Jerry Springer. Marsha, Marsha, Marsha. Don't be afraid, I come in peace, but if I sing, you'd better run. I sing the Barney song. "I love you. You love me!" Ha! Ha! Ha! This song is the worst part of the trip. Marsha? Marsha, Marsha, Marsha. Robot Dude is obsessed with The Brady Bunch. That's kind of scary. I am a Terminator! Take me to Arnold Schwarzenegger. He stole my Beanie Baby.

They leave Robot Dude's performance and start to think of places to visit. As usual, the conversation jumps from one topic to another, even though the two topics have nothing in common. Kevin: I got gassed down

Relaxation

... there! Pointing to a location down the street, Kevin tells of his experience. Kelli and Jon hang on his every word. Kevin: You know, when the Broncos won the Super Bowl? Uh, I got... Jon: Oh! You got teargassed! Kelli: Oh! Kevin: Our eyes were all watering! Jon: That band, Five Iron Frenzy, one of their songs is about that. They got teargassed, too. Kevin: It hurts!

Out of all the shops in the Tabor Center, they can not find anything to buy. Imagine that! The first store they go into is B. Dalton book store. Kevin: We could buy an educational book. Jon: Educational in what way? How 'bout Titanic? That's educational! The Far Side! Yes! Kevin: Star Trek! Nice choices- all highly educational. Kelli: Why would you buy Titanic when you can get it from Commercial Federal?! Haven't you heard that commercial? Jon: Okay, stop talking now. Uh, oh! I think they're closing! Kevin: We got kicked out of the book store 'cause I was looking at inappropriate material!

Actually, they get kicked out because the store is closing. At first, they don't know why they are being asked to leave the store. Jon thinks that it is just because they are teenagers and that the store is discriminating against them. As it turns out, that's not true. Kelli, on the other hand, is simply mortified. She looks as though she has just been publicly humiliated. They head toward Mrs. Field's Cookies. Too bad everything is closing. Kelli: We could get cookies at Mrs. Field's! Jon: Wait! Wait! I already got something. I'm not getting something else. Kelli: You can still get something. You have ten dollars. Kevin: Thirteen dollars and 33 cents. Jon: Okay, well if no one else is getting something, I'll spend your money, too. After looking around the Tabor Center for an hour and finding nothing to buy, they finally decide to head home.

Jon: Just a short drive made longer because I couldn't find a place to park! Kelli: Yeah! Where are we parked? Jon: About two blocks down from OctoberFest. Just as quickly as the conversation had started, it goes in a completely different direction. Nobody is ready for what Jon is just about to say. Jon: I saw Phantom of the Opera. It scared me so bad I peed my pants! Right there in the theatre, too. Kind of embarrassing 'cause I had my tie on, then I like... Both Kelli and Kevin are hysterically laughing. As far as everyone can tell, he had really peed his pants at the Opera. According to Jon, he is just joking- well...

Since they can't find anything to buy, they start brainstorming things to do with their money. Jon: I feel bad that I spent my money on coffee. Kelli: I was going to go take my 13 dollars and 33 cents and give it to a homeless person who can use it. Kevin: But how would we get a receipt for that? Jon: We could rip off part of his shoe! Kelli: Yeah! This was a homeless man's shoe!

Suddenly the conversation takes a different turn. Jon: Ya know what? I saw a guy going like 80 miles per hour this morning on C-470

...with a helmet of the back of his seat. He wasn't wearing it. Kevin and Kelli both look at each other as if Jon is crazy. They stare at each other for a few seconds, almost as if they are trying to understand what was just said to them. Kevin: That's great! Jon: No, but why buy a helmet to have it sit on the back of your seat? Kevin: It's the law. He's a law abiding citizen! Jon: Isn't it a law to also like wear it?!

They stop back at CHS to drop Kelli off at her car before heading to Juice Stop to grab a quick bite to eat. Kelli: It's that white Neon. White! Jon: Oh. Kevin: Don't hit it! Kelli: Yeah, please don't hit it! It's parked, but don't hit it! Jon: I have trouble with that. Oh, here it is. Dropping Kelli off at her car goes almost without incident. Just as Jon is pulling out of his parking space, Kelli starts to pull out at the same time. They both almost back into each other! If Jon had not slammed on his brakes, the evening would have had another interesting turn of events.

Jon: Oh, oh! Oh, my God! Kevin: Oh, geeze! We just almost hit the person we've been driving with! Both Kevin and Jon's eyes are as big as they can possibly get. Jon: Oh, my gosh! My mom would so, like, kill me! She'd ring my neck! I'd die! Jon wraps his hands around his neck to show his neck being "rung." After they avert a near collision, they head over to Juice Stop. Just their luck, Juice stop closes at eight o' clock on Saturday nights. It's about eight thirty. Since Juice Stop is closed and everyone is still hungry, they decide to go to McDonald's.

Kevin: Can I get a Number Six, uh, with sweet & sour sauce? And a Number Nine. Jon: A Chicken McNugget Happy Meal with sweet & sour sauce. Kelli: Oh! And I want a large Diet Coke, please. Jon: And a cheeseburger! Amazing! Three people can eat all of that food. Their excuse? "We're growing kids. We need our energy!"

The long, eventful evening leaves a lasting impression on everyone. The most profound impression, however, is made on Jon. Jon: I think I've had a very good time because I got coffee, chocolate, and stuff. I got to see the downtown sights, pet a horse that wouldn't bite me, and go watch OctoberFest. It was fun.

It's weird that with all of the things they could buy, everything they bought or were planning on buying was a food item. Are the lives of high school students so centered around food? With all of the stresses in everyday life, we all need an outlet of some kind or another to simply "get away from it all." No matter what we choose, as long as it relieves stress, it is an excellent outlet.

What exactly is style anyway? According to the Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, style is: \.stil\
1: to designate by an identifying term 2 a: to cause to conform to a customary style b: to design and make in accord with the prevailing mode. Now that the question has been answered, the huge question actually is, what is the style of the 90's? Is it almost like the 50's and 60's, with flashy colors and bell-bottoms? Is it like the 70's, where tighter-than-comfort ruled? Or is it like the 80's, where anything was cool if you could tight-roll it and shove it into your socks? Who knows? Senior Sarah Allison, Juniors Craig Nason, Sergio Gonzales, and Penny Hohn, and Sophomore Jessica Stephens came together to help solve this tremendously difficult question.

To answer the question, the group was split into two smaller groups of boys and girls. These groups were given several magazines and an assignment to find pictures of cloth-fits "our generation's" style. While searching needed to find an athletic, casual-evening style. The girls were to construct while the two constructed three began the assignment, they for the perfect outfits. As things wouldn't turn out vised. For example, the girls' devil's head...

Jessica: I like crazy! Penny: Smiling. Like Savers? Jessica: Yeah, Savers. Sarah: And then there's the middle of the road guys who just wear clothes because they have to. Everyone laughs.

Sergio: Points at his athletic woman. For the sporty girl we chose this style because we thought it looked quite different and it would give the girl that wore it her own individuality. It speaks out for how determined she is to win. So, we think that girls will really go for this kinda thing. If girls liked to dress up in mismatched shoes and had an odd-proportioned body, then maybe. He continues. For the formal (continued. . .)

... dressing, we went with something a little more modest, more down to earth, not something trashy or something too formal that you wouldn't ever wear but could wear anywhere. And last is casual. We wanted to do something a little different. It's still kinda that exotic kinda thing, but it's still down to earth.

Craig: Girls' fashion. He pauses; he has to think for a second. When I looked at this assignment, I tried to do more modest stuff because I think girls that dress modest show they have confidence with who they are. Sergio: Exactly. Craig: I think girls that have a sense of color are awesome and that's what we have goin' here. The red-tan combo (the casual girl) and the light blue navy blue thing (the formal girl). And sporty girl, she is just havin' a good time. Sergio: And in conclusion, fashion is fashion, but people need to try and stay who they are. Craig: Not to be the clothes, but to be the person inside the clothes.

The boys smile big because they are very proud of the three girls they have constructed.

Do the boys have the style of the girls' right? Do the girls have the style of the boys' right? As compared each other's creations, a sure answer occurred: nobody's

At least we girls can match our shoes. Craig: Defends their creation. She's just trying to play sports. She's just jammin' out. Sarah: Yes, she is! A burst of laughter. Sergio: She's just trying to get into the groove of the sport she plays... see the small halter-top? Obviously way too excited about the halter-top. Sarah: Hesitates. Yeah. Craig: Notice how we dressed them with all their clothes? Going back to the issue of girls' confidence with their clothing. Sarah: Yeah, I like that look a lot. Craig: It shows the girls have more confidence in themselves.

In attempt to achieve a level of comfort, Freshman Justin Alber chooses the ever popular jeans outfit with a large pullover sweatshirt. Providing comfort and warmth, sweatshirts were a popular addition to any type of pants worn by numerous students. photo by David Proctor

Sophomore Heather Cross casually laughs at a joke while showing her individual taste in hairstyles. A look with several braids was an option explored by students who wanted an alternative to their everyday hairstyles or an opportunity to express a more creative side. photo by Alison Brock

The guys spot the poster and begin to laugh. Craig: So, sporty man is the demon? Jessica: Yeah, ha ha. The sporty guy has the head from World Industry Skateboards. The head is a part of devil guy. Sergio: Looks confused. Which one is the casual? Sarah: This one. She points to the largest one on the poster. Sergio: Wow! That's way too flashy. I don't know anyone—Craig: V-neck? Wife-beater—Sergio: Sarcastically. Okay, let's get some tight leather pants in there. Penny: They're corduroys! Sergio: Points to the smallest guy on the poster. What are these then? Craig: Sarcastically. The guys are wearing tight leather pants in all three shots. Girls: Laughter. The boys definitely do not agree with what the girls have constructed. Sergio: I really don't know honestly, a lot of guys who would wear a V-neck and a wife-beater as a dress up outfit. That's kinda new to me. I don't think you could really walk into in office doing that. Mocks the evening-wear guy the girls constructed. Sarah: Yeah, why not? Defends her fellow group member. we know now is that guys and girls obviously look at style in a different way. Not only do boys and girls disagree with style, but so do members of the same sex. To be brief in explaining the style of "our generation," one would have to say it's a mixture of... well, everything. It is too difficult to explain. We are a mixture of all generations, tight-rolled, flashy-colored, and even tighter-than-comfort. So, the question of what style is can never be answered. "Our style" is too many things.

What is it like to meet new people for the first time? First, it's awkward and uncomfortable. Then, as you begin to interact and learn more about each other, you become more relaxed. Four students that didn't know each other were recruited to demonstrate what meeting people for the first time is like. These four, Senior Aaron Belliston, Junior Andrea Lane, Sophomore Tommy Harris, and Freshman Anna High, had lunch together at Angie's Restaurant. How did they interact?

Aaron: Hey, what's up? I'm Aaron, but people call me "Jumping Jack." I don't know why, they just do. Tommy: I'm Tommy Harris. Everyone is tense. They are all strangers and do not know a thing about each other. They search for something to talk about. Aaron: Tommy, what grade are you in? Tommy: I'm a sophomore. What grade are you in? Aaron: I'm a senior. Andrea: Dude, that's not fair! Aaron: And how about you? Andrea: I'm a junior; it sucks! Aaron: You're almost there. Andrea:

I wish I were there. Anna: I'm Anna High. I'm a freshman. Everyone turns to Andrea. She has not introduced herself. Andrea: What? Oh yeah, I'm Andrea Lane. Silence. Although they've become more easy and know a little about each other, the talk is still full of awkward pauses.

Aaron: Well, all right. What can they talk about? Andrea: about the weather? Of course.

Anna: Okay. So, uh, how

Aaron: Kind of hot and humid. They remain uncomfortable because they have not found much in common. Hmm. So, what looks good on this menu here? Tommy: I don't know. Aaron: Cocking his head. Let's take a look, shall we? Everyone opens their menus. Aaron: This pizza pie looks good, the eight inch one. What are you thinking, Tommy? Tommy: I'm thinking about the pizza pie with Italian sausage. Andrea: That's what I was looking at, too. Aaron: Doesn't that sound weird, though, an eight-inch Italian sausage. They erupt with laughter. Aaron: Kind of gross. The laughter gets louder. Aaron: But, we won't talk about that at the dinner table. Aaron tries to make the others more comfortable by cracking jokes. They are all shaking with laughter, and Andrea looks as if she is going to fall out of her chair. They take a moment to calm down. Andrea looks around the restaurant at the decor.

Andrea: The decoration here's great. Tommy: Like the doors? Andrea: The doors are classic, but I was talking about the old radios and

Freshman Ryan Blenker pays for his food during B-lunch after waiting in the long line. Frustrating many, the long lines were not easy to deal with on a hungry stomach. The lines, however, were somewhat shortened by the presence of two lunch periods. photo by Alison Brock

Senior Zach Cartaya is all-smiles as he gathers with friends under a pavilion at Clement Park. Students found that the park provided a good setting to get together with friends and engage in a variety of activities, such as picnics. Also, the pavilions provided shelter on rainy days. photo by Jenny Wallick

Displaying their friendship, Seniors Kelly Beer and Jessica Rosecrans take a break from their activities to have some fun. Similar to other groups of students, the spirit squads spent so much time together that friendship was inevitable. photo by Ryan Walda

Stopping while eating lunch, Sophomore Darran Metzler ponders over the conversation of his friends. For lunchtime selections, some preferred to bring their lunches, while others went to the school store, the cafeteria, or nearby restaurants to satisfy their hunger. photo by Chris Clary

Can I get iced tea? Andrea does kind of stick out! Aaron: Well, anyway. So, what kind of music do you guys like? Tommy: Just about anything besides country. Anna: Oh, come on. Andrea: Country is included in that everything category. Anna: Country's awesome. Aaron: I hate country, but I work at Lone Star, and all they play is country, so I've kinda gotten used to it. I've memorized every single song. I still don't like it all that much. Anna and Andrea have found one thing they have in common. Unfortunately, it happens to be the opposite of the opinion Aaron and Tommy share. Tommy: It's all about the dog dying and... Anna interrupts. Anna: No, that's the big stereotype. They all start to argue and talk at once. Nobody can understand what anybody else is saying. Aaron: I have to hear it, like, eight hours a day. That's all they sing about. Anna: No, they do not sing about a dog. Andrea: Hey, we could talk about the weather! Andrea's attempt to change the subject fails miserably. Aaron: Did you ever hear that joke? What do you get if you play country music backwards? You get your wife back, your car back, your house back. Aaron's joke stops the debate.

Aaron decides to make peace with a joke. Aaron: Did you ever hear that joke? What do you get if you play country music backwards? You get your wife back, your car back, your house back. Aaron's joke stops the debate.

Aaron: So, how do you like high school so far? Aaron decides to change the subject, catching Anna off guard. He is trying to find a common interest with her. Anna: It's cool. It's a lot better than Ken Caryl. Aaron: Well, that's good. The waitress comes out and waits a second to get their attention. Waitress: Are you ready to order? Aaron: Yeah, I think we're ready. I'll have an eight-inch cheese pizza. Anna: I'll have an eight-inch Canadian bacon. Andrea: I'd like an eight-inch pizza with Italian sausage and pepperoni. Tommy: I'll get the same as her. So, Andrea and Tommy both decide to have the eight-inch Italian sausages. Andrea: Ooh, aren't we original? Andrea and Tommy obviously have a lot in common.

Aaron: So, what are you guys going to do when you get out of high school? Andrea: I'm going to New York for art school. Aaron: Juliard? Andrea: No, interior design. Aaron: Cool. So, where would you live? In New York? Andrea: Yeah, probably for a while because that's where the market is. But I would come back here. Andrea and Aaron seem to get along well. Aaron: They say that when you live in Colorado, you always come back. Yeah, Colorado is a nice place to live! Once again, Aaron tries to find a common interest with Anna. Aaron: So, Anna. ...Anna? Anna: Yeah. Aaron: Do you have a brother or any sisters? Anna: I have two sisters. They live in New Mexico. Aaron: What part? Anna: Clovis. Aaron slams his hands down on the table. Aaron: Clovis, New Mexico?!? Andrea, Tommy, and Anna find Aaron's reaction hilarious. Aaron: Is that not the weirdest thing? My best friend just moved down there. Anna: Dude, I hate that place. Have you ever been there? Aaron: Yeah, I was there all summer. Anna: I can't stand that place. That's where my dad lives. I'm there once a year, and it's really boring. Aaron: Is that not weird that we were both in Clovis, New Mexico, wherever that is? I never heard of it until my friend moved there. He called me. He's like, guess what we do on Friday and Saturday nights? We drive up and down Main Street. I'm like, hmm, I'll probably come visit you real soon. They all laugh. Anna: Clovis is so boring! I mean, think about what they have there. They have a two-screen movie theater, a bowling alley, and two skating rinks. Aaron and Anna have finally found something that they have in common. So what if it's Clovis, New Mexico!

The waitress brings the food out, and they all begin to eat. Aaron: The mall down there sucks, too. Anna: Everybody shops at Walmart. Anna: They have a 24-hour Wal-Mart. My dad goes there at, like, 11 o'clock at night. He's like, I'm going to go buy some milk. I'm like, you buy milk at Walmart? It just sounds really weird. Tommy: I didn't know Walmart sold milk! Anna: Laughing. Yeah. Aaron: There's a Super Walmart. Anna: Yeah, there's a Super Walmart. That's where everybody buys their clothes. We all know everybody loves clothes from Walmart. Tommy: See, I know why they're building a Super Walmart. It's a tourist attraction. Tommy: Come to Clovis, they've got a Super Walmart. Andrea: Open 24 hours. Tommy: And a movie theater with two movies. Andrea: And, like, a five lane bowling alley. I vote Clovis, New Mexico for Senior Trip! Everyone has found a common topic. They have completely opened up. They're no longer strangers. They finish eating and the waitress comes over. Aaron: I don't think we need anything else. This wasn't too bad, not bad at all! Andrea: No, not at all.

Common interests always help people to interact. Many people make their friends in activities they're involved with. Others make friends with people in their classes. Whatever it may be, our common interests, even Clovis, are what hold us together.

Senior Michele Fox rejoices that her car was not wrapped in plastic wrap or "tagged" by Bear Creek, like Senior Wade Frank's. The frustration of discovering one's car littered with shoe-polish messages demeaning CHS ran rampant before important games. photo by Ryan Walda

How much does time really control the lives of high school students? Senior Annie Ford, Juniors Kristi Mohrbacher and Mike Sheehan, Sophomore Beth Lavelly, and Freshmen Paul Freeman and Shannon Zele set out to answer this question by going on a scavenger hunt to local places relevant to life at Columbine. The scavenger hunt was a race to see who could guess all of the clues and finish first. This scavenger hunt took them to Juice Stop, Columbine Library, Video City, and FunPlex. The two groups (Kristi, Mike, and Shannon against Annie, Beth, and Paul) started from Columbine and were each given a clue about where to go. At each location they received a new clue. The hunt begins...

Kristi: Catching her breath after running to the car. They are trying to get a good start on the hunt. I'm so out of breath. Mike: He reads their first clue which will take them to Video City. "Find Platoon which has your next clue." Shannon: Where is Video City? Kristi: It's up here. They approach Video City. Mike: We're going to win, I know it. Shannon: Do we get the second clue from there or what? Mike: It's in the movie Platoon. Shannon: What if somebody rents the movie? Kristi: Then we're really messed up! Mike: Do you guys want me to go in there, or do we all have to go inside? Kristi: We all have to come in, I think. Shannon: What is the movie again? Mike: Platoon... They slam their doors and rush in to get the movie. They frantically search the war section of the video store, scanning all the titles. Suddenly, they grab it. They snatch the clue and throw the case on the ground as the Video City employee watches and asks, "Is that the only one you wanted?"

At the same time, Annie, Beth, and Paul are getting excited over their first clue- "Go to a popular teen hangout with fruit drinks." They have to find the price, including tax, of drink number 23. Annie: We need to go to Juice Stop. I wonder where the other team is at? Paul: With confidence. They're behind us. After a wild ride, they arrive at Juice Stop and race inside. Annie reads the clue as they race back outside- it tells them their next clue is in a children's book. Beth: Do you think the next place is Barnes and Noble? Annie: No, it's Columbine Library. Something suddenly dawns on her. Hey! We never found out how much the drink was. Beth: Oh, well. Paul: He's the voice of reason. But we have to. There is a shriek of distress. They race back in and shout to the cashier for the price...

Meanwhile, the other team is figuring out their next clue, debating how to get there. Mike: "Go to the miniature golf section in this place

...that's full of things to do and ask for a scorecard and get your next clue." Kristi and Shannon: In unison. FunPlex. Mike: That could take a while. Kristi: Let's go down... Mike: ...to Coal Mine. He finishes her sentence. They make it to FunPlex. Kristi: Which entrance do I want to go in here? Mike: For miniature golf, the first entrance we come to. Kristi: Okay. Shannon: Miniature golf? They slam their doors and race into FunPlex. They barrel through the arcade and arrive, breathlessly, at the miniature golf counter... At the same time, Annie, Beth, and Paul are facing frustration at the Columbine Library. They dash into the library, careful not to be too noisy. Paul: What are we supposed to do? Librarian: What team are you? Paul: Mistakenly. Team two. Librarian: I have your book, but it's not the one that your clue said. Paul mistakenly told the librarian the wrong team and caused his team to receive the wrong clue. Suspicion rose that they had been messed up on purpose. They straighten it out and raced to the car. Paul: Reads. "Go to the miniature golf course in this place that's full of things to do and ask for a scorecard and get your next clue." Annie: It's FunPlex. What's the fastest way to FunPlex? She struggles with which direction to go...

Working hard, Kristi, Mike, and Shannon fly out of FunPlex, rapidly catching their breath as they read their next clue. Mike: "Go to the children's section of this place that's full of books. Ask the children's librarian for Horton Catches the Egg, by Dr. Seuss. In it you will find your next clue." Shannon: We need to go to Columbine Library. Mike: We seem to be making good time. They pull in the circular drive in front of the library. Kristi: We'll park here. They race for the library's entrance. The Dr. Seuss book is sitting on the counter. When they get to the desk of the children's librarian, she is busy, so they frantically search the book for their clue. Mike: Is it in here? The librarian turns to them and tells them that they do, in fact, have the clue...

Meanwhile, the other team is nearing their third destination: FunPlex. They sprint from the car to the building. Beth: Go in here. They race into FunPlex's closest entrance to receive their next clue...

Annie, Beth, and Paul are racing to Annie's car. Annie: Next place. Paul reads the clue which tells them this place has great things to see and to find the movie Blazing Saddles. Beth: This place has great things to see? Annie: Video City! Paul: Where is that? Beth and Annie think hard. They head to the general vicinity of Video City, still not sure where it is exactly. Annie: Okay, this better be Video City. It's gotta be. We gotta make sure this is Video City because I will be mad. This is our ticket to success...

Kristi, Mike, and Shannon are hurriedly leaving the library reading the next clue. Shannon: "Go to this popular teen hangout that serves a variety of drinks. Here, find the price, including tax, of number 23. The

Senior Veronica Jones takes a much-needed nap in the middle of a lengthy class lecture. Many students used class time for napping because they were unable to find other convenient hours due to extra-curricular activities that also required additional energy and awareness. photo by Ryan Walda

With nineteen minutes left and a tied game at hand, Senior Kevin Hofstra receives the ball as he works to score on the opposing team. Long practice sessions payed off as the varsity soccer team went on to win the game, as well as the league championship. photo by Alison Brock

Junior Beth Ratay and Senior Ben Lausten "swing" the night away at Clement Park, a local recreational location. This year, swing dancing was organized at a specific pavilion by interested students. Many students also found time to venture downtown to swing at the Mercury Cafe. photo by Jenny Wallick

Freshman Brienne Zimmer focuses intently on catching her prop while practicing her routine for color guard on the baseball field. Color guard members spent many hours on the field working and perfecting each stunt for winter guard shows as well as marching band performances. photo by Jenny Wallick

CHS marching band Drum Majors Junior Alise Williamson and Senior Carly Witt wisely use their time on the bus to a competition to work on homework. With all the involvement of students, most tried to find time at any spare moment to focus on their studies. photo by Jenny Wallick

Junior Beth Marzoni relaxes comfortably in the sunlight during her free time, giving her an extra opportunity to work on her tan. Many students found that spare time was hard to come by and an occasional power nap periodically could revive awareness for the day.

...next clue will be in the bottom of the cup." It's Juice Stop. They speed through the Chanson Plaza parking lot, barely stopping at stop signs and flying over speed bumps. Kristi pulls into a parking spot and they run into Juice Stop. There are many people waiting. They go around the line and ask for the cup with their next clue...

Beth: Blazing Saddles is a classic, right? They ask the employee where it is and she gives them hints. Employee: Mel Brooks was in Spaceballs. He's a producer. Beth: In distress. I don't know!!! Annie and Paul: Together. I don't even know who Mel Brooks is! Annie: Frustrated. This is ridiculous! Suddenly: Mel Brooks, Mel Brooks! There's Blazing Saddles! They grab the clue and frantically rush out to the car. Paul: "Here's your final clue. Go to a place near the school where you can play soccer, football, baseball, and softball. In this place there is a place of water that is fun to be at because you can run around in it." Annie: The fountain in Clement...

The other team, finished at Juice Stop, is trying to figure out their final clue, which tells them to go to go where there are many places to play sports and where there's water to run in. Shannon realizes that it is the fountain in Clement Park. They wildly drive to Clement Park.

Shannon: What are we supposed to do here? There is no one else there...

The other team is debating if they will beat the others to the finish. Annie frantically drives to Clement so that they win. They pull through the Clement parking lot. Annie: They better not be here, man. They get out of the car and see that they aren't first. Annie: NO!!!! There's no way! The two teams gather at the center of the fountain and start telling about their adventures. Annie: Rematch! The other team gawks at her as if she is nuts. In unison: WHAT?!?!?

Both teams head back to the school so that the winners can get their prizes, but Annie, Beth, and Paul think that they may have won. Annie: Hey guys, what was the price of the Juice Stop cup? The other team guesses a random number. Annie, Beth, and Paul: WE WON!!! Then it is decided that the juniors and seniors will receive the prize because they have been at CHS the longest and the scavenger hunt was about time. Beth, Paul, and Shannon: NOT FAIR!!!

Teenagers deal with time every day in many different ways. Time controlled the lives of Annie, Beth, Paul, Kristi, Mike, and Shannon for about an hour. This scavenger hunt proved when teenagers are put to the test, they do everything they can to beat time.

Showing off his toga composed of a simple sheet, Senior Joel McCormick relaxes. Many found Toga Day an easy day to dress up for. They simply rolled out of bed, tangled in their sheets, and hurried to school. At lunch students participated in a contest involving eating pie with no hands. photo by Alex Dudik

Juniors Erica Schmidt and Breanna Peters compare their army outfits and arm tatoos. Army Day was the most popular of spirit week, with many students dressing up on Wednesday. Army surplus shops were bombarded with students Tuesday night as they picked their attire. photo by Jenny Wallick

Exactly what happens after a guy asks a girl (or a girl asks a guy—hey, it's the 90's) to the Homecoming dance? Of course, there's always the initial excitement of the prospect of attending and having a blast dancing the night away. Soon, though, that wears off, and the guys and girls must get down to business. Doing what?

To see the female perspective, Junior Kristin Brown followed Junior Sarah Fisicaro, Sarah's mother, and Junior Alise Williamson as Sarah looked for her Homecoming dress and prepared for the dance.

The fun starts at the Joslins at Southwest Plaza. Searching, Sarah describes the dress she wants. Sarah: I don't want a light dress. I'd probably spill something, like, bright red on it, so it would be really noticeable. And I don't want a short dress because it would show off my volleyball bruises. Sarah sorts through the racks. Sarah: What color should I get? Mom: Whatever color you like. Sarah: She holds up a silver and black A-line dress. See, this is the style of dress I want. Is it bad, you guys? Alise: No, try it on. Sarah: You have to tell me if a dress looks really retarded, OK? As if we would do any different...

After figuring out how to put different dresses on (straps and strings can be complicated) and finding that most don't fit right, Sarah decides not to put any on hold. She ends up in Sears. Alise: Sarah, I don't think you should limit yourself to long dresses. Sarah's mom holds up a short, navy-blue dress lined in baby blue. I really like that one. Sarah: It's a changeable dress. Mom: You wear it one way one (continued. . .)

To see the male perspective, Senior Ryan Ishino followed Senior Bobby Strobel around to see how he got ready on the day of the Homecoming dance.

The preparation begins in the morning when Bobby is deciding what to wear to the dance that evening. Ryan: So, what are you going to wear tonight? Bobby: Looking in his closet. I think I'm going to wear the same pants that I wore last year. Ryan: What about a shirt? Bobby: I am going to wear a gray shirt with a tie and suspenders. What are you going to wear? Ryan: I bought some beige pants the other day and I am going to wear a striped shirt.

Bobby: Trying on some black pants. Hey, Ryan, I think I grew from last year because my black pants are too short. Ryan: What? Why didn't you try them on before now? Bobby: I thought they would fit. Ryan: Does the shirt fit? Bobby: I guess so. Oh (continued. . .)

With her friends looking on, Senior Carrie Sabey holds up a camera at the Homecoming assembly in order to capture the memorable experience. ... year and then you reverse it the next. Sarah: Oh, yeah.

Sarah puts that dress on hold, heads to Frenze, and finds a dress that she loves- black chiffon with embroidery on the bodice. Naturally, it doesn't fit her. She heads to Dillard's at Park Meadows and finally finds a dress...

On the day of the dance, Kristin and Sarah talk while an employee of Antoine du

*Cnez rolls Sarah's hair in curlers. Kristin: I don't know how I'm going to do to my hair. Sarah: I'm pretty sure I'm getting mine half up and coming out of the top of it. Huh?

Kristin: Out of the top of it? Sarah: See, I don't just want, like, a half-ponytail. I'm going to have the part pulled back go up somehow, and then it's gonna come out so it's a little fountain. I don't know, we're just gonna curl it and see how it goes.*

*The curlers are having an effect on her. My head's a little top-heavy here. Hairstylist: We're only halfway done. Sarah: Sarcastically. Oh, good. I'm, like, falling over.*

Later, while the dryer sets Sarah's curls and she sings songs from Grease, her hairstylist clarifies how Sarah wants her hair fixed. Hairstylist: Do you want any curly tendrils or do you just want it all back? Sarah: Um... Hairstylist: I think it would look more mature all back. Sarah: Well, whatever. The hairstylist carefully places and sculpts every strand of Sarah's hair before she's finally done. Sarah sees her hair in the mirror from all angles and is satisfied- she is undoubtedly ready for a fun-filled dance.

The preparation for the dance may not be the most exciting part of Homecoming week, but it helps make the entire night one to remember. For many, it is as memorable as spirit week, the sporting events, and the dance itself.

... yeah, I need a belt too. Ryan: Sarcastically. Nice job, genius. Way to wait until the last minute.

We drive to Foley's and look for a pair of pants that will fit. Ryan: How much are you planning to spend for the pants and a belt? Bobby: Oh, I don't know.

*Probably around fifty bucks. Pointing to black slacks. These pants are just like the ones I had last year. Looking in his wallet. I think I'll buy them. Let me try them on. Ryan: You are going to buy the first pair of pants that you see? Bobby:

Heading towards the dressing room. I don't care. As long as they look okay. Ryan: All right.

Bobby: Emerging from the dressing room. They fit, and now I need a belt. Picking a black belt from the rack. This one looks decent. I think I'll buy this also. So, after spending fifteen minutes looking for clothes, Bobby is ready for the dance.*

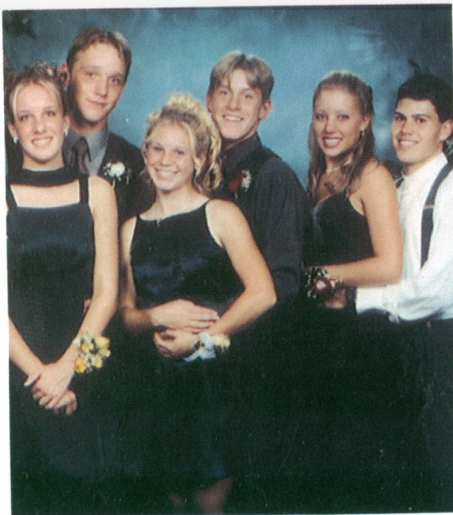

*Later that afternoon, we discuss how to comb our hair. Ryan: Are you just going to slick your hair forward? Bobby: Pointing to his short hair. Yeah, what else am I supposed to do? Ryan: I guess I have to do the same. *After applying a handful of gel into his hair, we are ready to pick up our dates.

Remember when you wrote that essay about Pip's adventures in Great Expectations, prepared a PowerPoint project for social studies, or discussed the meaning of "First Frost" in class (aren't poems supposed to rhyme?). What about waking up at 5:30 to meet with your study group in hopes of completing the chemistry write-up for the lab you didn't understand? (Like, who understands how equilibrium shifts anyway?) It's about spending two hours studying for the American History final that covers the whole semester. It's about the discipline you acquire after spending an entire evening perfecting your oral Spanish presentation. Most of all, we know it's about the character built into each individual by overcoming the toughest academic challenges, even when sometimes it means falling a little bit short. It's about the sense of accomplishment, the acknowledgment of success, and the creation of an individual through one's achievements. it's about discipline.

What is English? English was or was not important to some students for many reasons. The curriculum involved three basic ideas: reading, grammar, and vocabulary. } vague

Threwout their four years at Columbine, the ^{students} classes read many novels. Two highlights included To Kill a Mockingbird and The Great Gatsby. These novels portrayed characters from the books that were many jealous cruel happy, smart, or any of the other emotions displayed in books. Students were also expected too complete never ending study guides. Essays ranged from traditional literary analyses concerning life lessons, such as the experiences of Hester Prynne in The Scarlet Letter, to persuasive essays about how legislation should be made to change the driving or drinking age. Their were also problem/solution essays in which the student stated the problem in society and offered a detailed solution. } awkward

Subject: The Columbine High School Business Department

Re: Your inquiry

Many students took business classes and successfully acquired a variety of business-oriented skills. The business department offered a selection of classes including Accounting, Computer Creativity, Computers A-Z, Introduction to Business, Introduction to Windows, Keyboarding I, and Marketing I and II. "Business classes are important because they help prepare you for the business world," stated Freshman Elaine Miller.

The students and teachers in the business department were excited about acquiring a new computer lab. Sophomore Bryan Adams said, "It's nice to have computers that work." The business department also cleaned out the old computer lab. According to Mr. Stoeklen, they cleaned out the lab so all teachers could have a computer if they wanted.

The business department offered real-world classes that helped students "test the waters" of life after high school and college. If you have any further questions or comments, you can contact my people.

Surprise! Amazed by the difficult problems in Algebra I, Sophomore Tasha Nygard turns to ask classmate Sophomore Cortney Mohr about a puzzling problem. Many students relied on each other when in need of assistance and found partner work a good way to better understand the material. photo by Jenny Wallick

As Senior Jason Rauzi works hard to solve the complicated math problem given to him, he relies on his calculator to perform the simple, yet necessary operations. Calculators became essential for many who chose to use them for graphing and other complex functions. photo by Jenny Wallick

Laughing at a silly mistake, Sophomore Gabriela Luna receives assistance from her Algebra I teacher, Mr. Blatchford. When students were in need of assistance, or when they exhibited an effort to participate in class and understand the material, teachers were eager to help photo by Jenny Wallick

Concerned with his Geometry homework, Sophomore Casey Hetzel attempts to correctly use his compass while performing an in-class assignment. Tools, such as the protractor and compass, came in handy when creating geometric shapes that needed to be exact. photo by Aaron Wright

Concentrating on her up-to-date calculator, Senior Rachel Erbert takes time out of her busy math class to solve a challenging problem in Trigonometry. Found throughout the school, many students possessed TI-81, 82, 83, or 86 calculators, which also contained many games. photo by Jenny Wallick

Counting Up the Numbers

Solve the following story problems to learn about math programs at CHS:

1. Of the 1618 students enrolled in the math department, 1261 are in the traditional math program. The number s of the traditional math-bound students enrolled in Calculus is equivalent to $s/50 = 21/(0.5s + 4)$. In Trigonometry/Math Analysis, there are $[42 + 0.5(3!)](\log 1024/\log 8)$ students. There is one more than twice as many students in Algebra II as there are in Trigonometry/Math Analysis. Algebra I has x fewer students than does Algebra II when $x(x - 14) = 2x + 17$. The most students, $[(625/5 + 175)/1.5]$ more than Algebra I, are enrolled in Geometry. How many students are enrolled in each of the traditional math classes?
2. No more than 30 students can be in one math class at the same time. Out of 61 classes, 13 are dedicated to the IMP program. If there are four more students in IMP 4 than in IMP 3, eight more students in IMP 2 than in IMP 1, 60 more students in IMP 2 than in IMP 4, and five more than twice as many students in IMP 1 as in IMP 3, how many students are in each? How many classes of each are there? What is the average number of IMP classes?
3. A total of 14 teachers work in the math department. Two teach one level, ten teach two levels, and two teach three levels. Statistics, Calculus, IMP 2, IMP 3, and IMP 4 are taught by one teacher each. If the teachers of Algebra I, Algebra II, and Trigonometry/Math Analysis line up shoulder to shoulder to form a right triangle; the number of teachers for each line segment of the triangle parallels a Pythagorean triple. The Algebra I teachers represent the height, the Algebra II teachers represent the hypotenuse, and the Trigonometry/Math Analysis teachers represent the length of the triangle. If the sum of these teachers is 12, how many teachers are there for Algebra I? Algebra II? Trigonometry/Math Analysis?

ANSWERS TO ABOVE WORD PROBLEMS

1. A) Number of students in Calculus.
 $s/50 = 21/(0.5s + 4)$
 $s^2 + 4s = 1050$
 $s^2 + 4s - 2100 = 0$
 $(s - 42)(s + 50) = 0$
 $s = 42$ students
 B) Number of students in Trig/Math Anal.
 $[42 + 0.5(3!)](\log 1024/\log 8) =$
 $(42 + 3)(3)(1/3) = 45(3) = 150$ students
 C) Number of students in Algebra II.
 $21 + 2(150) + 1 = 300$ students
 D) Number of students in Algebra I.
 $x(x - 14) = 2x + 17$
 $x^2 - 14x = 2x + 17$
 $x^2 - 16x - 17 = 0$
 $(x - 17)(x + 1) = 0$
 $x = 17$ fewer students and $301 - 17 = 284$ students
 E) Number of students in Geometry.
 $[(625/5 + 175)/1.5] = (125 + 175)/1.5 = 300/1.5 = 200$ more students
 $284 + 200 = 484$ students
2. A) number of kids in IMP1, B) number of kids in IMP2, C) number of kids in IMP3, D) number of kids in IMP4.
 $c + 4 = d, a + 8 = b, d + 60 = b, 2c + 5 = a$
 $c - d = -4, a - b = -8, -b + d = -60, -a + 2c = -5$ make a matrix

CUT TO DRAFTING: The tech arts department also included Drafting. According to Sophomore Jacob Bauer, "Drafting is a fun class when you can relax some and still get your work done." Mr. Talocco was in charge of providing the students with all of their drafting knowledge, such as helpful hints on constructing a floor plan. FOCUS: Both Beginning and Advanced Drafting students learned the importance of precision and patience because every measurement needed to be exact.

FADE IN TO WOODWORKING: The third component of tech arts was Woodworking. ZOOM IN: Woodworking was a good class for students who liked working with their hands and building things. "Woods is a great class," according to Freshman Seth Dubois. Making various household items and learning woodshop safety were some of the hands-on projects that students performed. FADE OUT.

During Computers A-Z, Sophomore Daniel Lott intensely concentrates on reassembling a piece of computer equipment. In this computer class, one of the tests was to disassemble and reassemble a computer in an allotted amount of time. photo by David Proctor Focusing intently on the subject at hand, Junior Jenny Davis draws a hallway in accurate proportion to the best of her ability. One of the most important assignments in Drawing I was sketching a school hallway with as much attention to detail and precision as possible.

Precision and Patience

Title: Succeeding in Science at Columbine High School

Date: 1998-1999

Objective: 1. To study a variety of sciences.
2. To gain some understanding of these sciences.
3. To pass Columbine's science classes!

Purpose: To fulfill the science requirement needed to graduate.

Background: Most Columbine students enrolled in Earth Science as freshmen, Biology I as sophomores, Chemistry or Physics as juniors, and seniors usually enrolled in the science they did not take as a junior. Columbine also offered a variety of accelerated science classes, such as Accelerated Chemistry and Biology II. While many students found science to be challenging, Biology teacher Mr. Johnson disagreed. He claimed that by the sophomore age level students should be able to study and prepare for their classes without much trouble. Most students felt that the level of difficulty for the science classes went up as the grade level increased.

Procedure: 1. Participate in several units for each class.
2. Arrive to class on-time and ready to begin work.
3. Perform labs ranging from creating a weather map to fitting drops of water onto a penny.
4. Outline vast numbers of pages from a textbook.
5. Take notes over endless information.
6. Be prepared for difficult tests and quizzes. According to Sophomore Lindsay Swanson, "Probably the most difficult thing about Biology is the tests."
7. Participate in class in order to earn valuable participation points.

Conclusion: In conclusion, students who enrolled in science classes at Columbine learned about many aspects of life in the world around them. Students gained note-taking skills, organizational skills, and a better understanding of the world.

THE ART OF THE TIE-DYE SHIRT

1. Pre-wash new fabrics in Synthrap SP Detergent. Then wash and rinse as normal.
2. In a plastic bucket, mix 3/4 cup of Dye Fixer with one gallon warm water. Add your clean white fabric to the mixture and stir. Let soak for 10-15 minutes or longer.
3. Remove fabric from "fixer water" and wring out excess water, leaving fabric wet.
4. Tie or fold fabric as desired (spiral, spider, or blotches-you're allowed to be creative.)
5. Prepare dye: a) chemical water mix: 1 quart and 3/4 cup warm water, 2 teaspoons Ludigol, 1 teaspoon water softener. (You may use plain water if these chemicals are not available.) b) Mix Dye Powder with chemical water or plain tap water in small concentrated solutions. More dye added to the water results in brighter colors. The dye will go bad after one or two days.
6. Squirt, pour, or paint dye onto fabric.
7. Do not untie fabric. Let the fabric set for four to eighteen hours in a warm place.
8. Wash the fabric with Synthrapol SP detergent. Add 1/8 cup to 1/4 cup of Synthrapol SP to a bucket of warm water. Wash fabric, drain wash water, rinse with cold running water, and dry fabric.

Walking off the marching field for the last time at Columbine, Senior Brett O'Neill feels a sense of nostalgia at remembering all his years as a band member. This year the marching band was recognized as "Most Improved Band" at the state competition. photo by Jenny Wallick

Despite the intense volume emitted by the keyboard, Senior Kristen Long admires the ability of Senior Tony Fazio while he plays a classical piece on the keyboard during a free moment in choir. Students enrolled in music classes often had hidden abilities in more than one area. photo by Alex Dudik

At the State Championships in Cherry Creek, Senior Rachel Erbert gives a triumphant yell during the marching band's final performance.

Color Guard had a phenomenal season, placing seventh at State, and never below fifth at the other state-wide competitions. photo by Alex Dudik

Practicing his bass, Freshman Jay Bruchis intently plays to the beat of the ensemble while the group tries the sound of a new song. Jazz Band performed various types of songs ranging from swing music to traditional and new age jazz, which satisfied the tastes of all members. photo by Jenny Wallick

Practice makes perfect for Sophomore Kalynda Bingham as she plays with an attitude through the music with the Jazz Band. Jazz Band met every day during seventh period and practiced constantly to ensure the highest quality of performance possible at concerts. photo by Jenny Wallick

Whistle While You Work

Music is the unity and succession of tone and sound,
At CHS musically inclined students can be found.

Choir is taught by the two Leland Andres, father and son,
Most of the students find that choir is full of fun.

"The best part of choir is the performances," Freshman Stephanie Dater stated,

"I like the music and people," Junior Amber Thomas melodically related.

The different choirs each performed a vast variety of choral pieces,

Andres Sr., remarked that as the choirs improve,
the difficulty increases.

Then, later in the fall, the choirs work on songs for the holidays.

They perform these pieces for audiences, adding to the holiday craze.

Those who preferred to play instruments joined one of the bands,
Bill Biskup taught most of the ones that entertained all the fans.

The biggest group at CHS, Marching Band, performed at many competitions,

Biskup said that this season the band was in good condition.
Biskup told that all the bands have done a good job this year,

And that all the bands are worthy of a great big cheer.

The Jazz Band overcame some difficulties and became near fantastic.

"Overall, I feel we have done an excellent job," commented Sophomore Brett Kostalnick.

Through choir and band, the students displayed their talent to the community.

Together, each class successfully performed their pieces in perfect unity.

All Around the World

What were the classes that students had to take to receive their social studies credits? Below is a guide to all the classes offered to students. The timeline shows the chronological order of classes for each grade level. Find where each class was taught by using the map and key below.

- 9th grade ♣Government- Freshmen spent the year learning about the U.S. Government. Toward the end of the year, they demonstrated their knowledge through a mock trial.
- 10th grade ☉American History- Sophomores spent a lot of time working out of the book and taking notes from lectures. Projects were also a big part of the curriculum given to students to increase their knowledge of culture and past events.
- 11th grade ☉World History- Students learned to work together by making group presentations. In Mr. Fleener's class a group of four students in each period performed a mummification ritual.
- ♣Sociology- Students learned about many kinds of deviant behaviors. Movies were a great teaching tool that let students observe this first hand.
- ♣Anthropology- Students studied fossils and certain cultural aspects, such as urban legends, to gain insight and knowledge of the four human origin theories.
- 12th grade ☉Gov/Econ- Seniors learned about business, Wall Street, and different people's views by watching movies and reading books like the Autobiography of Malcolm X.
- ☹Psychology- Students delved into the human mind to study the way people act and react to certain situations. Freud was one of the many psychologists studied.
- ☉Geography- This class allowed students to learn about the earth and its physical features. Map work was a popular part of the course and was used as a study guide.
- ♠AP American History- Seniors went deeper into American history to gain greater knowledge of the United States while studying how the past affects the present.

With the aid of the encyclopedia, Junior Jami Roubidoux works on a World History project in the library. The library provided many students with the solitude and resources needed to inject ideas and creativity into assignments, and it was easily accessible during off-hours and lunch. photo by Jenny Wallick

Concentrating on the presentation in front of them, Anthropology students Juniors Jenny Torrez and Sarah Agustini illustrate their knowledge of culture and its characteristics. Anthropology was open to juniors and seniors who wished to explore the origin of man. photo by Jenny Wallick

Focusing on the overhead projector, Junior Nick Romanyshyn takes careful notes in World History as Mr. Fleener lectures. Diagrams permitted students to place a picture with information, which allowed for better comprehension and response. photo by David Proctor

With a look of determination, Senior Amy Evans completes an assignment from Government/Economics class that entails a bit of calculation. All seniors were required to take a semester of Government/Economics, and many took another social studies elective as well. photo by Jenny Wallick

Caught in the spirit of Geography class, Seniors Carrie Sabey and Tammy Schwartzott measure the length of their arms for a class project. Geography was a class offered to senior students who were curious about the features and traits of the earth. photo by Jenny Wallick

CHORES TO DO THIS SEMESTER

1. Develop positive coping skills (TEEN LIVING)
 - Understand myself and my relationships.
2. Learn transitional skills from the home to the real world (INDEPENDENT LIVING)
 - Plan for the future and prepare for success after high school.
3. Learn how to create safe environments for children (CHILD DEVELOPMENT/PARENTING)
 - Learn skills relating to care and guidance of children from the time of conception throughout the teen years.
4. Establish successful and lasting friendships (RELATIONSHIPS/FAMILY LIFE ISSUES)
 - Explore family issues and support systems in the community.
5. Learn how to cook basic recipes (FOOD EXPERIENCES)
 - Learn how to have a healthy mind and body.
6. Inspire to entertain dinner guests with flair (CREATIVE FOODS)
 - Plan and prepare meals with baking and decorating skills.
7. Develop appreciation for exotic foods (FOREIGN/GOURMET FOODS)
 - Develop advanced food preparation skills and learn the customs of other countries.
8. Work with floor plans and color (INTERIOR DESIGN)
 - Learn architectural styles and housing needs.
9. Explore personal image and trends (FASHION/CLOTHING)
 - Learn about the fashion industry and clothing design.

SEMESTER OBSTACLE COURSE

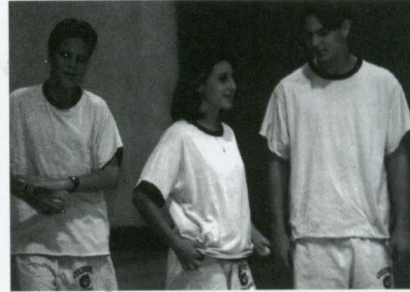

Prepared by Ryan Ishino

Pump it up! Motivated and using the weights offered to them, Senior Elaine Bowie and Sophomore Sarah Sales work hard at attaining muscular domination and smile at their success. Weights allowed students to increase muscle mass and have fun doing it. photo by Chris Clary

With their eyes focused on the pie in front of them, Seniors Melanie King and Mandy Nicholls carefully lift the steaming dessert out of the oven, being cautious not to burn themselves. Safety was a measure taken by students in many classes, including Life Management. photo by Ryan Walda

Fighting the pull of the weights, Senior Jeremy Harris works against the resistance of the dumbbells to complete his final set. The weight room offered many different kinds of machines which gave students the chance to choose a machine most fitting to their needs. photo by Travis Hill

Trying out the meal she just prepared, Sophomore Angela Nelson smiles in delight at the pleasurable taste of her dessert. Foods was taken by those who were interested in expanding their culinary capabilities and learning about the infinite possibilities of new dishes. photo by Ryan Walda

experience

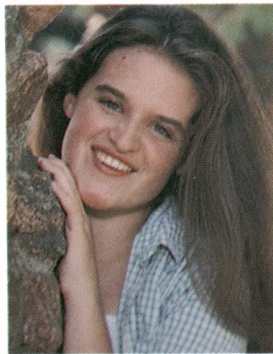

Anticipation. The word rattles around in your head throughout your senior year (along with everything else you attempt to hold on to). Your life this year is controlled by the anticipation that is all around you. It's about waiting for weeks as your English teacher holds on to the perfect research paper that you devoted almost a month of your life to (most of that time was spent planning, right?). Your heart pounds every time you think about what grade you'll get on it. It's about the knocking of your knees as you wait to find out if the person of your dreams wants to go to Prom with you. It's about checking the senior countdown every day in spring as you walk down the same stairs you've been using for the past four years (just this year you finally learned to continue walking). It's about the butterflies that take over in your stomach as you stand with the rest of your class and throw your graduation cap up to the sky. It's about all of the unforgettable memories. it's about experience.

Connecting

Describe a person you have bonded with in high school.

In January of 1998 we said good-bye to our families and friends and set off on an airplane halfway across the world. Together we flew into an adventure that we will always cherish. Myself and five others became "the Americans" in the land down under. I feel that these are the people I bonded most with in high school because we were forced to bond. We were on the other side of the world with only each other to talk to, to complain to, to cry to, and to try new things with. I feel that one of the best things about my trip to Australia was the friends I made along the way that will always remain close to my heart.

~ Amalia Fernand

All through my four years of interactive math I have had the advantage of having a terrific teacher. Mrs. McMullen has helped me through my problems in math and in my life. Just recently I had a possible disaster come into my life. My doctor told me that I was going through menopause at seventeen. I was informed that I would not have the ability to have children and that my body would begin to look like that of a fifty-year-old woman within the next year. This information made my heart sink into the ground. Mrs. McMullen told me about an even larger problem in her life with her daughter. When she told me her story, I was lifted up and ached for her. Having her allow me into her personal life helped me to open my eyes. It showed me that people don't only love people that are related to them, people love people that show them compassion. I learned this because I love Mrs. McMullen. She has helped me learn both math and how important the things available in life are.

~ Julie Vargo

The person that I have bonded with the most in high school is a person that I have never seen. I met him freshman year in an Internet chat room. We share the same interests, the same desires, and the same attitudes towards many aspects in life. We were born thousands of miles apart and into different cultures, but we are almost exactly the same. His name is Yiming Yao, the kindest person I have ever met. We now spend every weekend talking to each other over the Internet. We share our classroom struggles, the books we are reading, and each other's opinion towards life. It is because of Yiming that I have begun to appreciate friendship even more.

~ John Batchelder

miles apart friends are."

Journey

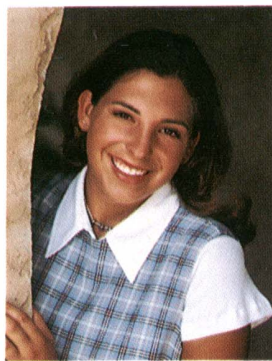

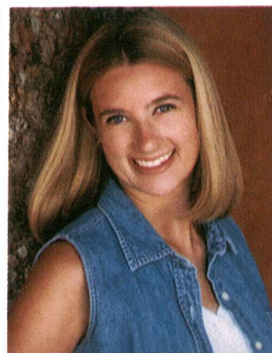

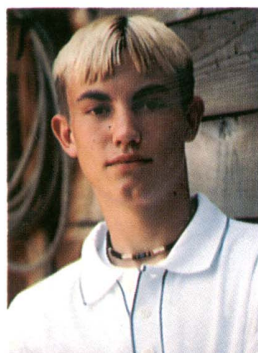

- This year, Columbine added more informational web sites. Even the peer counselors got in on the action by having a website available to students who don't want to ask questions in person.
- Mrs. Klemm had to fill in for Mrs. Samson's absence at the beginning of AP English students' journey to the depths of well-known literature.
- There were three senior foreign exchange students. Ana Ayala from Ecuador, Valerio Cendali from Italy, and Hanna Heijel from Sweden all spent a portion of their senior year here at Columbine.

Adoration

Who was your childhood idol?

I think that a childhood idol who influenced my life would have to be my father. My dad was my hero. He was a neonatologist (doctor who takes care of premature babies), and he was constantly saving the lives of these human beings who were just starting out. He raised us well and instilled in us the values which I carry on to this day. When he died, my world changed. My family shattered, I realized I had to be the man of the house. I took on responsibilities that a nine-year-old kid should never have to take on. This helped shape me onto the man that I am today and the man I will become. I carry with me his legacy: his intelligence (top of his class at Harvard), his looks (big nose, dark hair), and his mannerisms (worrying too much, mostly). My father left me with an indelible image. He instilled in me all that I hold dear today. Though he's been gone for a long time now, I still feel grateful for the values he taught me when he went away. I will always strive to be as good a person as him.

~ Steve Cohen

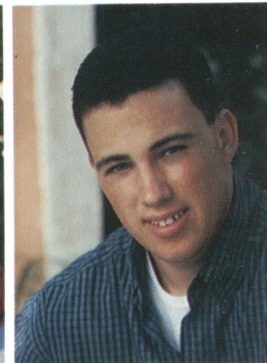

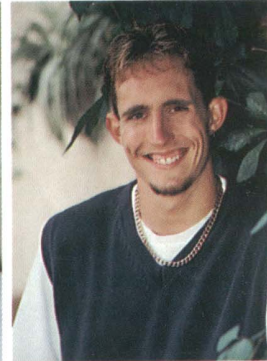

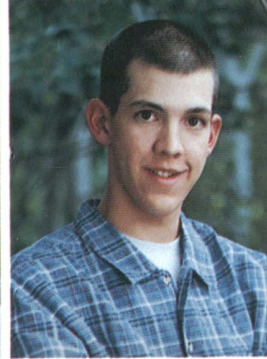

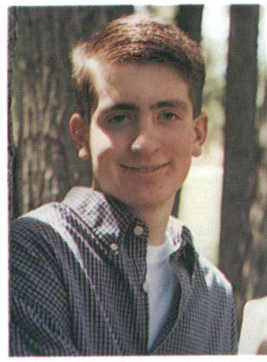

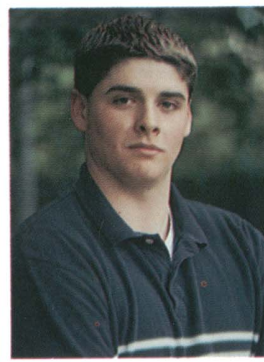

Even though my brother Nathan is younger than I am, I have always looked up to him. Through our experiences he has grown to be my biggest idol and dearest companion. He has been there through every one of my hardships, and I have seen him help others, too. Of all the people I know, he is the kindest. He has taught me how to love and show it in the way I act and in what I do. Most important, my brother has taught me the importance of true friendship.

~ Jessica Lopatin

The person I looked up to the most as a child was my Aunt Kris. We lived in a small college town in Iowa, and she lived in Dallas, so it was a big deal when we got to see her. I remember being amazed at how much luggage she would bring and marvelling at how much of that luggage contained cosmetics. I used to stare in wonder as she put her contacts in every morning and put on all that makeup, which I thought did not change her appearance at all. Aunt Kris was the epitome of all that is sparkly and desirable. She was independent until just after her fortieth birthday when she married my Uncle David. I thought that marriage would change her, but she is still the most outrageous and exciting person I know. The baby girl she is adopting is getting a great mother.

Regrets

What do you wish to have done differently?

If I could go back and do it all over again, there's a lot I would change. I wish I had talked more to the guy who sat behind me in Spanish class. I wish I had gotten to know the girl who always smiled at me in the halls. I wish I would have made peer counseling. I wish I had gone to class more. I wish I had tried out for Poms. I wish I had smiled more at people, and I almost wish we weren't growing up. My point is that every one of us can look back on the last four years and wish we had done something different, but there's no point in dwelling on that. We're moving on and growing up, and as scary as that is, it's also pretty exciting. Now we are going to have another chance to do all the things we wish we had done before.

~ Melissa Snow

If I could change one thing, I would have played soccer my junior and senior year. When I tried out as a freshman and sophomore, I didn't make it, which greatly discouraged me. When tryouts came around my junior year, even though I was confident I could make it, I didn't try out. Now, when I look back on that decision, I am sad that was the path I chose. When I see the smiles on all my friends' faces when they reminisce about past seasons, I wish I could have been there to enjoy those experiences. Now that I'm a senior, I have learned that it isn't so much how others look at you but how you feel about yourself. You see, I didn't try out my junior year because I thought I would be looked down upon by my peers as a junior on J.V. Now I realize that this was a grave mistake, as I gave up the chance to have the time of my life just because I was afraid of how I would look through other people's eyes. However, if I had tried out those two years, maybe I wouldn't have learned this and then my life would be totally different.

~ Tyson Miklebost

I wouldn't change anything throughout my life because I have been fortunate: fortunate enough to have a great family, great friends, and great times. Although I have made some mistakes, I learned from them and now I won't make them again. I have been extremely lucky during high school. I hope that everyone can have the same kind of positive adventures that I have experienced. My philosophy is that life is too short, so make everyday worth living. Without making those mistakes I would probably continue with those wrongdoings.

- Amber Burgess has played in three sports all four years and has lettered in each. Burgess lettered in softball, basketball, and track. She was also named one of 17 girls in the nation to play on the junior national softball team.

What has changed in your life this past year?

I do not believe I could pinpoint something specific that has changed me, but I have noticed something different and it has been a gradual change. It is the realization that I am an adult. This may sound boring and repetitious, but I have truly seen what this means. In the past year I have taken on more hours at work to save for the AP English trip. I own an automobile. I have bills, insurance, credit cards, and a checkbook. I have seen friendships crumble and then be put back together piece by piece. I have endured family problems anywhere from relationship struggles to family moving or even to drug problems. I am not looking for recognition here, that not being the point. Adults deal with these problems daily, monthly, and even yearly. It is exhausting and I feel exhausted, too. But with all of these hardships I have realized there are little moments of joy in between all the worries that prove to have more rewards than ever imagined.

~ Sara Smaldone

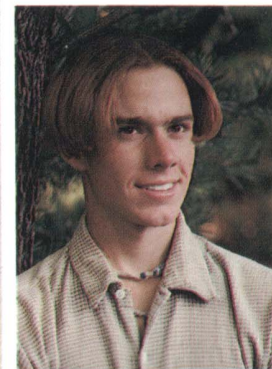

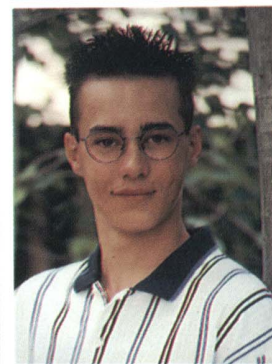

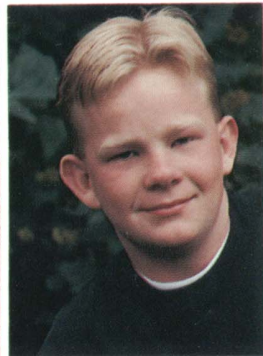

Even though I am supposed to write about what has changed about me during school, I'm going to write about what hasn't. I am vertically challenged. From the first day I set foot in the halls of Columbine, I have been one of its shorter students. Freshman and sophomore year it didn't really bother me, but when I became a junior and 75% of the underclassmen towered over me, I wasn't so happy. Let me tell you how being short has changed my high school life. It is a very large annoyance when teachers believe you are a sixteen-year-old sophomore when in actuality you are an eighteen-year-old senior. You can't follow any of your school sports teams because when you're at the games, you can't see over the other spectators. My favorite is being an Outdoor Lab leader. Do you know how hard it is to discipline a sixth grader when you have to shine the flashlight UP into his/her face? One last anecdote: It is the funniest thing in the world, at least to everyone else, when you get cards from first, second and third graders addressed to "The Little Guy." I no longer care about being six feet tall, but two more inches would be nice.

~ Scott Rathbun

The day that changed my life the most was the day I bought my car. If I could have looked into the future and seen how much more responsibility and less free time I now have, I never would have bought a car.

Occasion

Write about an eventful day in your life.

Through all four years of high school, the day I remember most was the day that I moved to Texas. I was going to be a sophomore and then my dad got transferred to Fort Worth. I will never forget the feeling I had. I felt as though my heart was breaking in two. All of my friends took me out to breakfast before I had to go to the airport. I couldn't eat; I just stared at my food and held back the tears. We tried to laugh and talk but it was hard. I had known these girls for four years and now I had to leave them. We had always called ourselves the fab five. We had so many great times together, and although we all said that we would remain such good friends, deep down we all knew that things would change. All my friends then came with me to the airport to get in their good-byes. They walked me to the gate and we all hugged and cried for about ten minutes. I can still see them turning away from me and walking down the concourse. They were all together and I was alone on my way to begin a new life in a new town.

~ Megan Kotter

One of the most interesting days in my life took place during my trip to Thailand. That morning we met our tour guide, a little man who did not speak English very well. We had been staying in Bangkok, and that day we drove for a couple of hours north of Bangkok. After stopping in a couple of towns and tourist sites, we went to see the largest Buddha. There was a temple with the Buddha and before entering the temple, it is required to remove your shoes and place them outside. When we first arrived in Thailand, I was concerned about my shoes getting stolen, but by this point of our trip I didn't figure anyone would steal them from a temple. The Buddha was so large I could barely see its head. When I was standing next to it, I only reached its knees. The Buddha was beautifully made of solid gold. As we were leaving the temple, we saw an old priest who looked like he was decaying. He had his finger up his nose, so I took his picture! When we got to the outside, my sister pointed out that my shoes were missing. My favorite running shoes were missing somewhere in Thailand. We stopped in the next town to get me some new shoes, but they were all too big to fit me. I had to buy these fake sandals that were really ugly and didn't fit. I spent the rest of that day wearing thin shoes that provided no protection from the rocks and heat of the streets of Thailand.

Changes

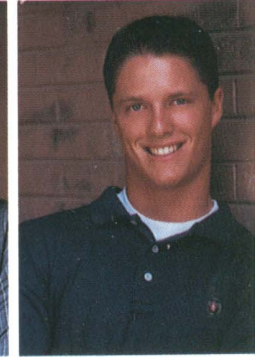

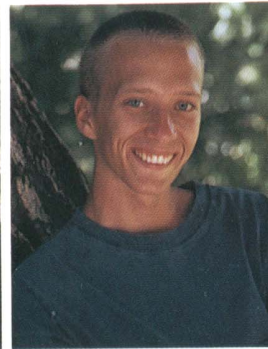

- This year we saw an end to the late start Thursdays that we had looked forward to every week as an opportunity for extra sleep.
- The first ever Swing Dance was held in the commons, sponsored by the Sophomore Senate. The swing dance was open to the school and community and had a good turnout.
- This year refunds were offered for the first time on the textbook fee.
- We were the last class to have the semester grading system.
- We were also the last class to have Mr. Ron Mithcell as school principal. Mr. Frank DeAngelis became principal in 1996.

Unforgettable

What was your most memorable moment in high school?

The most memorable event in my high school career was the night of November 9th when my fifteen brothers and I lost the state soccer championship. This may not be the happiest memory, but I don't believe that I'll ever have a more vivid picture of an event imprinted into my memory. For three hours on a chilly Wednesday night, an entire school joined together to support a single event. Everyone cheered together, laughed together, yelled together, and when it was all over, cried together. It was one of the very few times of my life that I felt totally exposed and vulnerable to all of my emotions. I had put my heart and soul on the line and lost. The crazy thing is that even though I sacrificed everything, I'd do it all over again and will when the time comes again this year to compete for the title.

~ Justin Carlson

My most memorable moment occurred when I played La Bamba for my Spanish class with Chris Bingel. We even played a song that we made up ourselves. I felt like a rock star. In fact, to be completely honest, I wanted to parade around the classroom like Richie Valens and scream like a helpless baby.

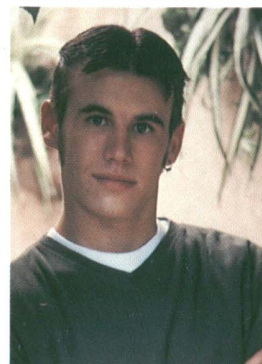

~ Tom Kridle

My most memorable day during high school occurred during my sophomore year. My friends and I were spending the night in a tent in Ed's back yard. We wouldn't turn the lantern off, so Ed got really mad. He got out of the tent and started kicking the tent and stomping on it while we were still in it. Then he started throwing lawn chairs at it and he stormed inside. The rest of us laughed about it.

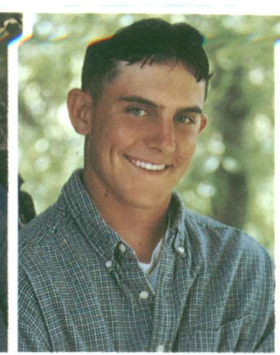

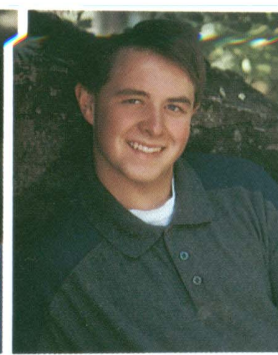

~ Jason Valentine

My most memorable moment during high school was the Chatfield/Columbine soccer game this year. I was the most important person on the field; I was the Rebel Man. I have never been big in sports, so this was a big deal for me. As the mascot, I stumbled out into public. It was extremely frightening at first. I couldn't see, it was sweltering inside of that huge head, and I had no clue how to act. When I saw all of my peers in the stands I sweated bullets. Then my best friend Luke came up to me and said, "Way to go man, lookin' good!" That made all the difference in the world, changing the whole experience for me. I became loose and free, the sign of a great mascot.

Tomorrow

Where do you hope to see yourself ten years from now?

Ten years. Wow, that's a while away. For the longest time I could not see life after high school, and the future seemed frightening. Ten years from now I see myself practicing law in a successful firm started by my wife and me. How did I get there? That's definitely a good question. After graduating from Columbine, I was accepted into the University of Denver, where I claimed myself as a political science major. After a year, Jessie, who you all know as my girlfriend, and I would set off for Massachusetts. With both of us being accepted into college there, I would switch my major to law, jurist prudence, and legal thought. Upon graduation we would both be accepted into Yale Law, and during the summer before law school we would be happily married. After graduating from Yale Law, we would settle down on the quiet island of Martha's Vineyard. Our firm would grow and the remainder of our dream complete. Ten years from now my dream of true happiness will be fulfilled.

~ Joshua Hevert

Carrying a wailing kid, walking around the store, trying to find milk while attempting to calm a three-year-old, complaining toddler. That's how I see myself in ten years.

I'm married and have two kids. As for my career, I don't have one. I would be struggling to return to college after flunking out freshman year when I was eighteen. All the friends that I had acquired in high school would become fading memories of people I knew only through classrooms. My lifelong friends are the people I met outside of school—my friends from my other life that my high school friends said I had. Besides being dependant on my husband, my parents would play a huge role in my life by taking care of the kids and lending me money when things would get hard in my life. Who knows, it could happen.

~ Diwata Perez

In ten years I hope to see myself in a very prestigious medical school. I will be well on my way to becoming a doctor, a dream I have always hoped for. I will have taken enough chemistry and biology classes to choke a horse. I hope to take away from these classes experiences that I will cherish and will never forget. I hope I will continue to try my hardest in no matter what I do, not caring if I succeed or not, just knowing I tried my hardest. Ten years from now I hope I will be an inspiration and role model for others.

spirit

It's about the phone ringing off the hook on a Friday night as you and your friends attempt to make weekend plans. It's about struggling to understand a new concept in Accelerated Chemistry (you know will get by with the help of your classmates).
It's about meeting someone for the first time and then seeking them out in the halls in anticipation of a friendly hello. It's about the rumors you hear in class on Monday (your mind is thinking fast about how you will embellish the stories and pass them on the first chance you get). It's about screaming phrases of support in the crowd at the state soccer game (an event you know nothing about except that the participation of your classmates makes your attendance mandatory). It's about cherishing the people you know and accepting the people you don't. It's about coming together as a student body and supporting each individual. It's about the feeling that arises in any group that exists in harmony together.
its about spirit.

Ahh! You've deducted another year from your four-year list of existence Juniors at Columbine High School. Your freshman year of constantly being...

... picked on is over, your sophomore year of being classified as nothing is over, and the year that you've been waiting to end since the day it began, junior year, is over!

Being called an upperclassmen had its rewards, but it didn't really seem to matter much because you spent most of your time studying and doing all your homework. It always seemed like each of your teachers forgot you had five other classes to do work for and just decided to pile on the work for their class. "What am I going to do?" was a question you often asked yourself in frustration. "How am I going to get all this stuff done?" The stress became worse as you realized that you shouldn't have messed around at the beginning of the semester.

Spending your nights reading Cry the Beloved Country and studying for the Chemistry test over moles (you don't even really know what they are) seemed to be a regular occurrence. Having to attend late-night study groups at Barnes and Noble for the first time, discussing why a certain measurement has two significant figures, and what makes an acid were all new experiences that you just couldn't seem to comprehend. It all increased your feeling of anxiety and the feeling of wanting to pull all your hair out until you seemed to understand every single thing.

Then, there were always the wonderful subjects of history and math. Oh, what a mess your schedule turned out to be. You spent your free hour learning about the Middle Ages and the Roman Empire or trying to figure out what the heck a function does. No matter how much you tried, it always seemed that there was some small irrelevant fact you left out of your homework and, therefore, missed that particular test question.

A schedule packed with things such as work, classes, tutoring, sports practices, and more gave a new meaning to the word stress. Stress ruled your life until now, when it is all over!

overseas that you want to write about?

During the summer before my sophomore year, my family and I took a trip to Europe. We went through England, Austria, Germany, Italy, France, and Spain. In Nice, France, which is on the southern coast on the Mediterranean, a very exciting and scary incident occurred. We only stayed in Nice for a few days. On the last night we came back to our hotel to pack our bags in preparation for our early morning departure for Barcelona, Spain. The hotel we stayed in was an elaborate four story structure with two balconies. We went to bed at 12:00 a.m. that night after packing.

Around 4:00 in the morning, someone broke into our room. For a long time we were still asleep while the robber searched through our stuff. I was sleeping on a cot on the floor right where he was going through our stuff. I had my wallet right next to my bed, and he took it without me even waking up. He had also gathered together my uncle's passport, credit cards, his travelers checks, and his plane ticket for the next day. Meanwhile, my dad woke up and saw the robber in the room. My dad jumped out of bed, chasing him out of the room. The robber ran to the balcony. Then my dad hit him, almost knocking him off the balcony, a four-floor plummet. He escaped by jumping across the balcony, running along the little edge and down the building. In his possessions he had my wallet and all my uncle's valuables. As he was running he dropped the bag with all my uncle's items in it. Later I noticed my wallet was missing. In it I had 250 American dollars and 50 dollars worth of French money, along with my credit card.

Immediately after, I canceled the credit card. None of us went back to bed. We checked out the next day and finished the rest of our trip without any further problems. We all learned an important lesson, one that we'll never forget, especially me since it was my wallet he got away with. The funny thing is, a year later my wallet turned up in Paris, France, and they sent it to me; there was no money left. submitted by Chad Lening

The variety of club sports offered through many different organizations

Competitive Edge

helped students to participate in a sport that was not offered by the...

... high school, to participate in a sport for fun, or for practice.

Club sports offered through various programs included soccer, volleyball, swimming, ice hockey, tennis, lacrosse, baseball, basketball, and more. Student athletes played these sports competitively; others played just for the exercise and for the new and different experiences they brought. Some students traveled far away to play their sport, but many tried to stay as close to home as possible. Competitive tournaments offered athletes who played club sports an opportunity to travel while competing with their teammates. Teams traveled for tournaments as far away as Florida, where a local hockey team went for national championships.

A variety of athletes believed that playing for a club led to new friendships, especially with students from other schools. Freshman Jaimi Norden exclaimed, "Club sports have changed my whole life. They made me feel like I was a part of something. I have met some of my best friends on my sports teams." "I enjoyed playing a club sport because it introduced me to many new people. Through club sports one can make lifelong friends!" revealed Sophomore Sarah Wood. Students also believed that involvement in a club sport gave them a quality way to spend their free time. "It kept my schedule occupied; that way I didn't have too much free time," stated Wood.

Athletes often played a club sport after being cut from the team that was offered to them by the high school. Sports programs were offered at local YMCA's and other locations so that students did not have to give up the sports they loved. "It was often challenging to make sporting teams because of the large numbers of students trying out for only a few spots," explained Junior Beth Klepper.

Club sports became more and more popular with students as it became harder to make the high school teams and as they realized the fun and opportunities to meet new people club teams provided.

Describe, using as much detail as possible,

what life would be like in a Bunch of Parts

perfect world, created by you.

What would be your ideal world?

In the ideal world no one would be better than me. No one would look better than me, be more intelligent than me, or more athletic than me. There would be no advantages. We would all have the same intelligence, physical strength, endurance, kindness, and looks. There would be no unfair advantages. No one would finish second to the genius or to the girl whose long legs won the race.

Even with the same outside, we would not share identical insides. There would still be personalities and desires, loves and hates. We would be free to do what we want with nothing in the way to stop us.

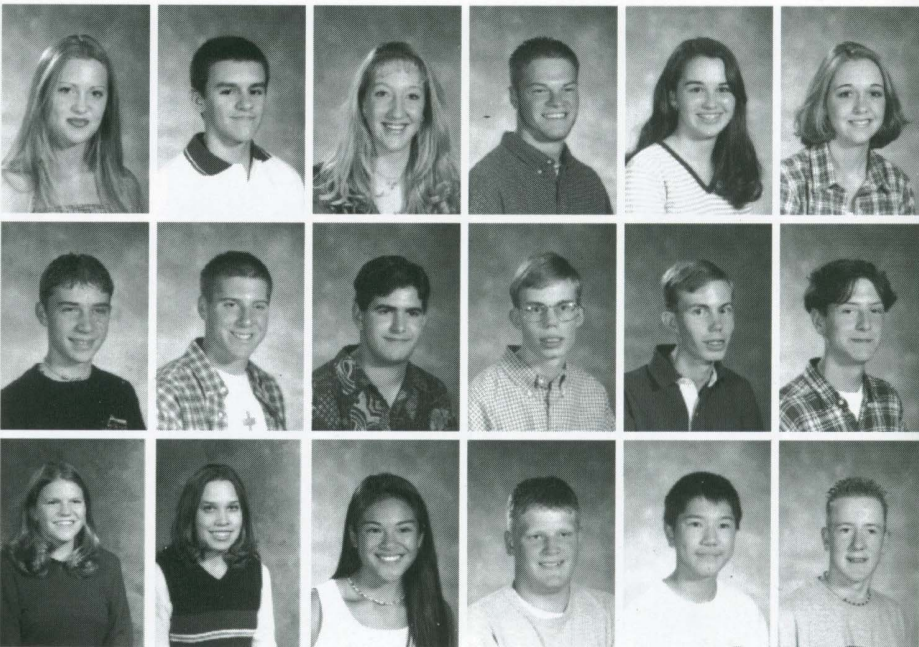

The more we try, the more we get. No head starts. There would be no one who is naturally better. Would this cause an eruption of competition? Maybe it would bring about ultimate peace. A peace that came through the realization of a commonality. A commonality that shared between people would allow them to see that we are one. One species. One species totally dependent on the rest of the species for survival.

Once this is realized, in my ideal world, there would be no more wars or competition. What would exist instead? Just cooperation for a more sufficient world. There would be no wars and everyone would be working for a single cause. The cause: the betterment of society. The ideal society would be like communism, but only theoretical communism, not real-world Russian communism.

My ideal people would realize that the harder they try, the more fulfilling their lives will become. Their hard work would be repaid many times over with increased free time and materialistic pleasure manifested out of their hard work.

Would this cause anarchy or an uprising? I doubt it. People want to stand up for what they believe. If people believe in the right cause, like the betterment of themselves as a part of the whole, then the whole will realize that it is just a whole bunch of parts.

Helping the community and learning life-

High Adventure

improving skills were a part of the experiences of those who participated in Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts.

When Girl Scouts were mentioned, most people thought of cookies. However, as Junior Beth Marzoni claimed, "We worked with younger girls and earned badges, stuff like that. It was a lot more than just selling cookies." Both Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts spent time earning badges. The badges ranged anywhere from cooking badges to transportation merit badges.

Most of the Boy Scouts at Columbine belonged to the Timberline district. The girls, on the other hand, belonged to the Mountain Breeze division.

A favorite aspect of Scouting was camping. Junior Aaron Wright stated, "On a typical camping trip, we sat around, watched the fire, told interesting jokes, and enjoyed each other's company." Junior Stephanie Hommel explained that the Girl Scouts went up to lodges and helped the younger Scouts to earn badges. The Senior Scouts at Columbine were responsible for helping teach the younger Girl Scouts: the Dai-sies, Brownies, and Cadets.

The students who were Scouts had been so for many years, and most of them planned on sticking with it until graduation. The goal of most Boy Scouts who were close to graduation, or their 18th birthday, was to earn their Eagle Scout rank. To achieve the Eagle Scout rank, a Boy Scout first completed his Eagle project. Junior Andrew Lagerborg explained that the Eagle project benefitted the community. Before a Boy Scout could start his Eagle project, he had to write up what he planned to do and submit it to a committee for approval. "For my project, I moved a bike rack at Normandy Elementary from the northwestern side of the school to the southeastern. The northwestern side was an area that was dangerous, so I felt it would be appropriate to move it," described Lagerborg.

Similarly, the Girl Scouts received the Gold Award. Hommel commented, "I'm working on earning the Gold Award right now and I'll receive that at the end of my senior year. Then, I might look into becoming a leader or something."

What are the qualities or aspects that you require in a person that you

Prized Possession

label "best friend," and why

do feel that this friend deserves this label?

What is a best friend? A best friend is someone who really cares, someone who has been there for you time after time, and someone who listens, shares, loves, hates, laughs, and cries with you. A best friend is a person's most prized possession.

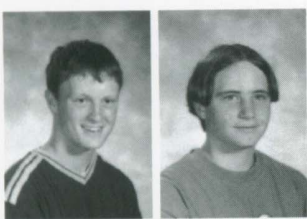

My best friend's name is Jennifer Tindall. We have known each other for two and a half years and have been best friends ever since. I remember the first time we met. We were both at a party in Englewood with some of our friends. Jenny and I started to talk and realized how much we had in common. I didn't have any money so Jenny, being the sweet person she is, offered to buy me some suckers. After that night I realized how cool of a person she was and decided to get to know her better. A couple of nights later I was invited to go to Jenny's birthday party. I chilled with her and her friends and had lots of fun. Ever since then we have been inseparable and always will be.

I consider Jenny my best friend for several outstanding reasons. Jenny is the person in my life that I have been able to trust more than anyone else. I can go to Jenny with any of my problems no matter what they are, and I know she will listen and try to give the best advice she can. Jenny always seems to be right by my side, making sure her best bud is okay. She has shown me that she is a very caring, lovable person with a big heart.

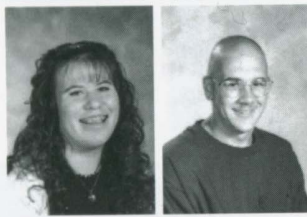

One significant moment that Jenny and I shared sticks out in my memory. I wasn't having a very good night for many reasons. I was crying and isolated myself. While I was crying Jenny came over to me, concerned, and asked me what was wrong. I'll hold the words that came next in my heart and soul for life. Jenny said with a reassuring voice, "You know Jen, somebody once told me that a person is the prettiest when they cry." Then she wiped a tear from my cheek and brightened my mood with her beautiful smile. That's why I call Jenny Tindall my best friend.

Training and Preparation to spend a week with sixth graders who admire you for everything you are. Students began to...

... prepare for their week away from home by going through interviews, filling out applications, and spending a whole Saturday learning what it's like to be a teacher. Students left at 6:30 on a Saturday morning, arrived at Mt. Evans or Windy Peak, and trained in various subjects. Then they were shown the paths around the camp. After an everlasting day, students finally returned home at about 6:30. "I learned so much about what teaching is all about. The training and preparation took a lot of time and it was a lot of hard work, but it was worth it. Sixth-grade lives are so simple; it was nice to be around that simplicity for a week," stated Briar Goldberg. Others were annoyed by the training session. "It was the longest day of my life. Our bus slid on the ice on the way home and we spent four hours on the bus," Lindsey White explained.

New to this year, the Outdoor Lab program began to have the students come up to the camp the Sunday night before their stay. The students went up to the camp and began to talk and prepare for the busy week. "The leaders get to know each other. This allows the groups of leaders to be unified and prepared by the time the kids get up there on Monday," described Mr. Holden, who was in charge of recruiting leaders. Students who participated in the Outdoor Lab program received one-half of a credit.

In addition to being leaders for Outdoor Lab, students had the opportunity to be Junior Counselors for the Core A retreat. The retreat took place at the YMCA at Snow Mountain Ranch for two days. Students aided the main counselors by teaching courses to Ken Caryl's Core A seventh graders. "The Apple Core retreat was so much fun. We got to mentor kids and learn about our fellow peers. I made a lot of new friends," described Senior Layne Newton.

Students interested in younger children and developing their leadership skills were attracted to apply to these programs, which offered an alternative to everyday school-life.

You've managed to do it - you've gotten through two long years of high school and you're close to being an upperclassman. You look back on...

Sophomores

... the past year as a sophomore and wonder where it has gone. The Scarlet Letter and biology were both challenges, but somehow you struggled through them and triumphed over them. You've started to realize that if you want to attend a good college, then you'll have to begin bucking down and doing your work. In other words you've learned that as much fun as procrastinating is, you'll have to learn to live without it. Right, who doesn't procrastinate?!

American History and American Literature provided challenges, especially when every novel you read seemed to have some sort of symbolism in it. There were vocabulary tests every week or two (what does "extirpate" mean anyway?). In history there were all those dates and important events. Why did you need to know all the states and their capitals?

The video project in American Studies proved to be a challenge when you had to squeeze that extra half-hour into an already busy schedule so that you could use that last ray of sunshine left in the day to finish filming. Remember Huck Finn and taking the time to go to that extra credit play on a busy night just so you could raise your grade two percentage points.

Biology proved to be the biggest challenge for some students. It was necessary to remember how to spell deoxyribonucleic acid, otherwise known as DNA. Will you ever remember what it really means after cramming for that final anyway? You never realized how fun and interesting dissecting a fetal pig was until you actually did it.

Upon receiving your report card, you realized that all of the hard work you did throughout the year finally paid off and you were glad that you made the choices you did.

You struggled through the year, getting help from friends and teachers whenever necessary. You've grown as a person and found out what it is like to be at the "top of the bottom." You have succeeded at finishing your second year of high school. Soon, you will be an upperclassmen, but for now, you are only a SOPHOMORE! Katie Sullivan past experiences. Out of every-

Procrastination

thing that you have learned,

explain, in detail, the greatest lesson.

One week I put off my homework until the night before it was due. Each day more homework was assigned and the pile grew. The week went by, and with each day, I became more tired. Between football and school I had little time to do anything else, and homework was not my first priority. Each day a test was given and studying was required. But I continued to put the studying off.

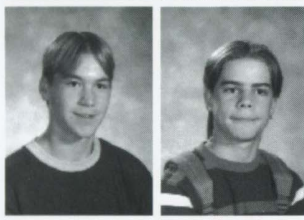

By Thursday I had football practice after school, three tests the next day, an essay due, and three other big homework assignments. After football, I hurried home and started my long task of completing my homework. I started by doing the essay because it was the most important. Writing an essay is a long process. Doing that alone in one night is a great task. It was ten o' clock before I started typing it. After the essay, I started my homework. Each assignment took me about fifteen to thirty minutes. So, at about midnight I started studying for my tests. After the long day nothing really set in my mind. It took me twice as long as usual to study and I still got little out of it.

I finally finished at one thirty in the morning and I still had to shower and eat. I ate my microwave dinner and started for the shower. I could barely stand. I took my shower, using as little energy as possible, and fell in bed. I fell asleep immediately. The next morning I slept right through my alarm. My mom ran screaming in to my room to wake me. I ran around the house trying to get ready on time. I was still tired from my exhausting night of studying. Even after I slept in, I only got four hours of sleep. That day at school I fell asleep in practically every class. I was extremely tired and my test grades showed it. Due to my cramming and tiredness, I bombed every test, and I was not anxious to see the grade I received on my essay. On that Friday I did nothing but sleep. Through this experience I have learned the most important lesson of this year, which is not to procrastinate. submitted by Sean Nossaman

On Monday nights throughout the school

Learning About God

year, Christian students from the Columbine and Chatfield areas had the option to attend Young ...

... Life, an organization that provided activities to promote the Christian religion. It was attended by about 40 to 80 students each week. "It was a fun chance to meet and get to know new people and learn about God," said Junior Crystalann Keesecker.

A typical night at Young Life usually lasted about an hour and consisted of playing games requiring the participation of everyone present. Singing "loud and crazy songs," performing skits, and bobbing for apples in a toilet (unused of course), was the standard. "The funniest thing that happened at Young Life was when [Senior] Annie Ford got an egg cracked on her head [during a game of 'egg roulette']," commented Junior Lindsay Blevins. The sessions ended with a five to fifteen minute Bible discussion. Guest speakers, such as teachers from Columbine, were often invited to speak about the Christian faith.

"McDonald's was usually the hang-out afterwards," Sophomore Ashley Berner revealed. The McDonald's environment allowed students to continue to enjoy each others company while they ate dinner.

The decision as to where Young Life was held was on a volunteer basis. Fliers containing maps and times were handed out on Mondays at school to encourage students' participation. Leaders also came after school and handed out information about Young Life. "It was a Christian get-together, but you didn't have to be Christian to go there," Berner explained.

Kevin Parker was in charge of the Columbine-Chatfield branch of Young Life. Leaders were commonly college students or recent college graduates because they could "better relate to high school students," Blevins admitted. In addition to the Monday night sessions, there were camps, such as the ski camp in December, that students attended if they desired. "Retreats were a blast and uplifting. They were what young life was all about, having fun with friends, and learning about God," Berner related.

thing that you have learned,

explain, in detail, the greatest lesson.

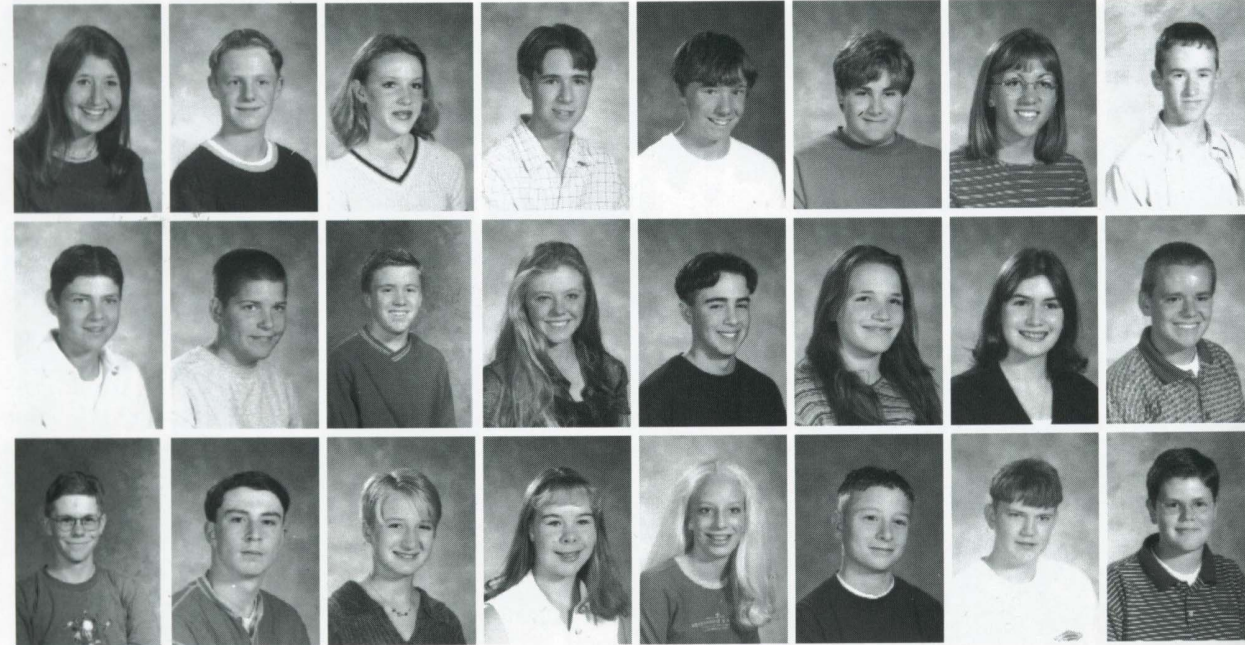

I have learned a lot of things this year, but probably the most important of them all is that if I want something, I need to get it for myself.

For me, Homecoming this year promised to be a lot like the one last year. A bunch of my friends and I were just going to hang out and maybe have a party. Basically, we had decided that it would be girls' night out, again. However, it didn't end up like that. One by one, they all got asked to the dance. Finally, there was just me who was not going. The last one to be asked called me the Saturday before the dance and said that she was going. She told me that I had to find a date and fast. There was this guy I really wanted to go with before they had all been asked, but I had decided not to ask him so that I wouldn't be leaving my friends at home. With only a week before the dance, I had to get up the nerve to ask him. I was so worried that he would say no. After all, I had only met him twice, and I doubted that he would remember me. All of my friends told me that I should ask him, but I was too scared. They volunteered to ask him for me because they went to his church. I figured that there would be nothing more humiliating than being rejected when they asked him for me. So I turned down their offer.

I waited and waited. Finally, by Tuesday, I got up enough nerve and decided to go ahead and ask him. After all, if he said no, I would still be sitting at home by myself. There was really nothing to lose. I called him right after school, and no one was home. I called a couple more times and still no one answered. Finally, I got a hold of him. Before I could say anything, he asked me if I had something really important to say. I asked him how he knew, and then he told me. How was I supposed to know that he had Caller ID, and it had logged every time I had called him? I almost hung up on him then, but I decided to go ahead with asking him. I did and he said yes. I had a great time Homecoming night and I am so glad that I asked him.

Several days after Homecoming I found out that if I had let my friends ask him, he would have said no. Now, I am not letting my friends do anything for me that I should do myself.

Imagine traveling across the country to experience the government

Leadership In Action

first-hand. The trip let students realize that "Democracy is not a...

... spectator sport," which was the trip motto. The Close Up Trip to Washington D.C. was November 1-7, 1998. The trip included four students: Senior Christopher Hooker, Juniors Jennifer Alverson and Jennifer Davis, and Sophomore Sabrina Anglada. The trip was a tour of Washington, D.C., plus a close-up look at how our government works. Schools from all over the country came at the same time. This allowed the students to interact with others from different backgrounds and with different views on government policies, actions, and foreign policy. One of the things that Close Up really emphasized is the fact that students had an impact on politics.

The trip included workshops on foreign relations, the impeachment hearings, and judicial issues, as well as tours of the major monuments, such as the Jefferson Memorial, Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial, Vietnam and Korea memorials, General Lee's plantation home, and a trip to historical Williamsburg. This year's group stayed in the Sheridan Hotel next to the Pentagon and did all of the tours via Close Up busses or the Washington D.C. "Metro" subway system. The last day of the trip gave the students an opportunity to do whatever they wanted with whomever they wished. Some attended various sites, such as the Smithsonian museums, FBI Laboratories, the Pentagon, and Ford's Theater. All students enjoyed a day off to experience things on their own

One of the many highlights of the trip was a play at the Kennedy Center, "Shear Madness," in which the students figured out a murder mystery. Mrs Herring, this year's sponsor, felt that the trip was so exciting because of the students she took. "My students were the ones that the student leaders and Close Up personnel always commented positively about. They were leaders, always energetic and full of fun, as well as very informed about the current situation," she commented. She hopes to be the sponsor for next year's trip as well.

What are the qualities that make your class, the class of 2000, 2001, or

Talent, Size and More

2002, the best class to ever

pass through Columbine High School?

There are three reasons that I think of that make our class so special. Those reasons are: we are the first class to actually spend the whole school year in the new millennium, our class is one of the largest ever to pass through Columbine, and I think we have one of the most talented classes when it comes to athletics.

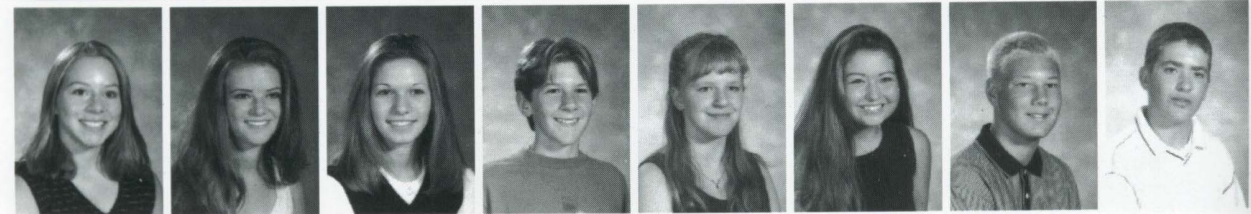

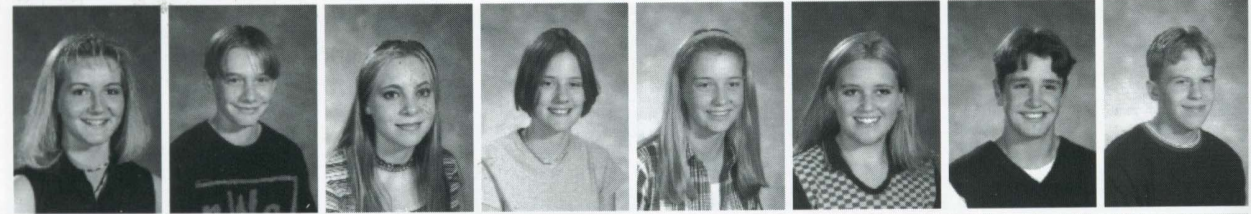

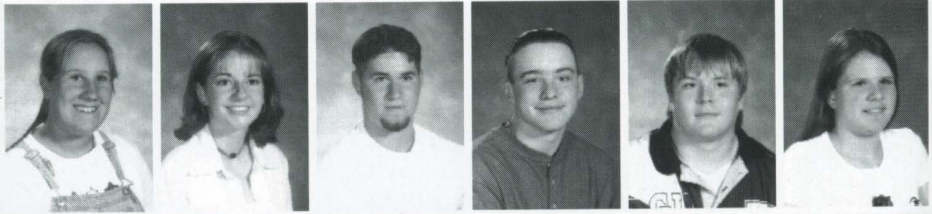

First of all, we are year number one in the new millenium. We will be the first class to spend an entire senior school year at Columbine High School in the twenty-first century. We will be entering a whole new era of technology by then, and things won't be the same as they are today. Classrooms will be more effective in teaching kids and teachers will be taught in new ways as well. Some might think that this is too short of a time for all this to happen, but they must remember that most advancements happen literally over night.

Second, our class of 2001 is partly responsible for the expansion of this school. Administration predicted a higher growth rate upcoming and so prepared by expanding Columbine.

The third reason I think our class is so special is because of the athletic talent that our class possesses. It can only be speculation right now, but I can see state championships characterizing our junior and senior years. Other schools are at this point also, but I think we have a competitive edge because more is expected from us by our coaches, older students, and role models. I think other schools should be aware of this hunger we have to win and to be the best.

In conclusion, 2001 will have the opportunity to watch the millenium pass and be a part of it. We are all a part of the class of 2001: the first class to graduate in the new millenium, one of the largest classes to ever pass through Columbine, a class with outstanding athletic potential, and a class that will be remembered and cherished by all who were a part of it.

While some Columbine students may find math to be tedious and difficult,

Difficult Competition

others find it to be an interesting and challenging subject and enjoy...

... competing at it in different ways.

Many students who excelled at math participated in various math competitions that took place throughout the year. The Continental Math League and Colorado Math League competitions took place multiple times at Columbine.

The Continental Math League tests were intended for freshmen. The tests contained six questions, and the results were compared with other high schools around the United States. Freshmen Lindsey Portincaso, who participated in the math league commented, "Taking this test [gave] you the opportunity to show your [math] skills." The Colorado Math League tests were intended for students who had taken or were enrolled in Algebra II. Senior Adam Dressel stated, "The math league test was useful because it allowed students to see what math abilities they had."

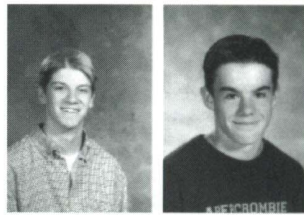

The American High School Mathematics Exam was held annually at Columbine for CHS students. Math teacher Raymond Bundy sponsored the event and stated that the tests were "pretty tough." Bundy claimed that students interested in the exam should have been enrolled at least in Math Analysis/Trigonometry and done very well in that class. The exam took place in three stages. Each stage was qualified for by doing well on the previous stage. According to Bundy, qualifying for the second stage was an extremely notable task.

The Colorado State University Math Day took place yearly, usually in November, at the Fort Collins CSU campus. The CHS team was sponsored by Shawn Tank who said that students who were in their third or fourth year of math usually did well on the test. The tests were taken in two parts, one part was individual and the second part required a team. CHS students usually did well, which boosted Columbine's reputation as an outstanding academics school.

require in a person that you

Unique Friendship

label "best friend," and why

do you feel this friend deserves this label?

Back in elementary school, I had a friend who was handicapped. Looking back into my past, I am able to vividly recall that kids were very cruel in elementary school. They were mean to everyone, for every possible reason. Being handicapped did not help my friend to fit in.

His name was Kevin. Every Thursday, Kevin used to come to my class. I was in sixth grade. Everyone used to make fun of him and push him. Kevin and I became friends because I was kind to him when he visited my class. I was his only friend in the whole sixth grade. I told everyone not to make fun of him because he didn't even understand why they were making fun of him. I said to them, trying to control my anger, "How would you like it if people made fun of you and you didn't understand why?" People nearly stopped making fun of Kevin for a while.

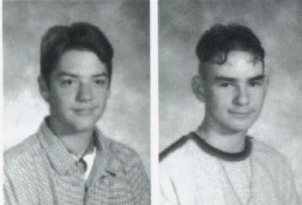

Once, one of my close friends was making fun of Kevin. I was infuriated and refused to speak with my friend until he apologized and realized that what he did was wrong. I made him promise not to ever make fun of Kevin again. Sometimes my classmates made fun of me for being Kevin's friend, but I did not care what they said. I didn't like when people would make fun of Kevin, but I didn't mind them making fun of me.

I used to get out of class to go do stuff with Kevin while other students had to stay in class and do their work. All of my work was excused. I even got to go to Kevin's classroom and eat cake for his birthday. I was so excited and my friends were jealous.

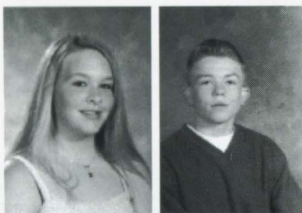

When I went to middle school and Kevin stayed in elementary school, I would go after school and visit him. I would try and go at least once a month to see him. I went after school when I didn't have a lot of homework. Kevin appreciated my visits, so I tried to go as often as my schedule would allow. I don't get the chance to see him very much these days, but I still miss him. I'm glad we had a friendship that no one else had.

Now that you're all finished with your first intimidating year of high school,

Freshmen

perhaps you can look back on it with nostalgia (or aversion, disgust, etc.)

All of those times the upperclassmen picked on you are officially over, and you can even begin to devise your own plans of torture for the years to come. You ask yourself, what did freshman year mean to me? What was it all about? Mostly, it provided preparation for the future.

It was a bright, sunny August morning that you walked up to the great doors of the school amidst conversation of reunited friends who were eager to share descriptions of the predominant events of the summer. You might have carried a backpack or only a notebook and a pencil; it didn't matter.

You remembered being the leader, the "king," of middle school, but then you were again starting over at the bottom. You saw faces you recognized, faces you did not. You entered the front hall and searched for your friends so as not to be alone in the moments before the bell rang and you were once again delivered to the mercy of your teachers. You wondered what your freshman year would entail, and now you know.

You started on your first vocabulary book and learned words like "slapdash" and "slipshod" that you had never heard before and probably never will hear again. You read one of the most well-known romances, Romeo and Juliet, and were transported to the world of the Montagues and Capulets. You also read To Kill a Mockingbird and saw a world full of racial prejudice through the eyes of a little girl.

In Geometry, you learned geometric constructions, shapes, formulas for area and volume, and tessellations; you even made an attempt at being the next M.C. Escher. Trigonometry was previewed for you in those last sections of right triangles and "your favorite Indian chief," SOHCAHTOA.

You examined laws, civics, rights, and privileges in American Government, and, in doing so, began to truly understand the meaning of "We the people." Having completed all the demands, you are no longer a freshman; more importantly, you are on to new and exciting things!

Will the new driver's licensing laws that are being considered affect

Sweet Sixteen

you, a family member, or close friend? What do you think about them?

If the driving law came into effect, forcing teenagers to wait until they turn eighteen to receive their drivers license, I think it would be a huge disappointment for every teenager in Colorado who is on the crest of turning sixteen. Youth across the state have looked forward to their sixteenth birthday since they could comprehend the aspect of driving. To change this would be a shock to everyone. The politicians who are leading this campaign are unjust and conceited. The laws won't do any good; they will merely delay the inevitable. They claim the laws will make drivers more mature when they take the wheel, but how much maturing goes on between the ages of sixteen and eighteen?

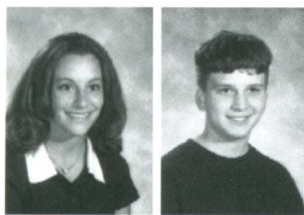

Another reason the law should not be put into effect is because of the impact it would have on car dealerships. For the next two years, there would be no new drivers, requiring fewer new cars, so profits would suffer. These outlandish ideas should be converted immediately to ensure the happiness of all teens across Colorado.

If the laws do come into effect, I think it will be too late to have much of an impact on me. I will be sixteen by the beginning of next year and that shouldn't be enough time for the law to come into effect. Once I have my license, they cannot revoke it. But I do know it will affect most of my friends. Talking to them, I know that they share my feelings and do not agree that this law would be beneficial to anyone. I am one of the only students in my class who will have their license by the start of next year. I know I will be giving lots of rides if the law comes into effect during, or shortly after, my sophomore year.

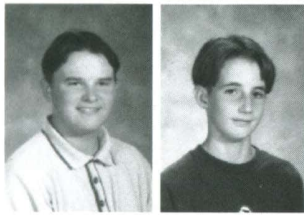

If any one who has authority over this matter reads this, please take the following into consideration: teens do not desire to wait until they turn eighteen to drive. The milestone of turning sixteen would be forever ended. No more sweet sixteen parties, no more road trips of freedom. Don't do it to us. Please.

What if the tables were turned on guys?

Casual, but Worth It

Instead of them asking girls out, the girls got their turn.

While this may have seemed practically...

... normal in the twentieth century, the Sadie Hawkins dance was "all girl." Girls did the asking to the dance in early December, and from there, things were done accordingly.

So, here's how the story went: a girl gathered up all of her courage to ask the boy of her dreams to go to Sadie's with her. The big question ranged from the stumbled and shaky, "Will you go with me?" to the perfectly planned question. Some went so far as to decorate their dreamboy's room, locker, or car. Next, the girl anxiously awaited the boy's response. Junior Kelly McIntosh stated that, "The suspense was almost worse than the actually asking."

After he said yes, the planning for the big night began. First, the tickets. The girl scrounged up the $15 for the couple's tickets (a stag ticket was $10 for those who went alone). Then, she planned the dinner. While it was not as fancy as prom, a dinner at a local fast-food restaurant was less than appealing. Last, the outfit had to be secured. Seeing as how this was not a formal, the perfect (and way too expensive) dress wasn't necessary.

Finally, on the night of the dance, one picked up the other. First, before the dance, the couple went to dinner at the restaurant of their choice. Junior Courtney Shakowski and her date went to the Rainforest Cafe in Cherry Creek. There were many other popular spots.

When they walked up to the dance, a big gingerbread house stood in front of them. When they walked through the doorway, they stepped on a layer of "snow," which emphasized the theme of winter. A huge snowflake hung from the ceiling that took one's breath away. After taking pictures, they danced all night. When the dance was over, there was nothing left to do but leave and go home or find a party. After all of the planning, it was over in less than six hours. McIntosh didn't care. She said, "The fun experienced during the night is always worth the courage you needed to ask."

past experiences. Out of every-

Survival Skills

thing that you have learned,

explain, in detail, the greatest lesson.

Imagine experiencing nature one on one and being completely isolated from the rest of the world. This summer I did exactly that. I went on a wilderness trip with my youth group. We spent seven long, hot days in the wilderness backpacking. We did not have access to running water, plumbing, good food, and nice comfy beds to sleep in, among many other things. Going on this trip made me realize how much I depended on all of these things. I learned a very important lesson: don't take things for granted.

Without these twentieth-century luxuries, one would think I would have been miserable. I soon became adapted to the conditions and was able to enjoy myself and those around me. Being extremely dirty made me miss running water; my body craved a hot shower. The food we were given to eat was not especially my favorite. However, no matter how bad the food was, you had to eat it to keep up your strength enough to support a heavy backpack. Every night after we choked down dinner, we returned to our sleeping bags for about five hours of sleep. We had to awaken much sooner than I expected to start on our ten to fifteen hour hikes.

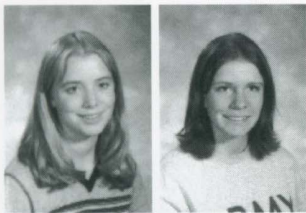

Another important quality I think I gained from this trip is to trust people and to stick together. We had to trust our guides to get us back to the camp safety, and we had to confide in each other for support and encouragement. When we stopped every day to set up camp, it took teamwork and concentration to get the tents set up before dark.

Leaving camp on the first day, we were merely acquaintances, but throughout the week we developed close friendships. In fact, when the trip was over, we missed seeing each other every day and going through our daily routine. Now when we see each other we feel a close bond developed through shared experiences. This was the best experience of my life. It taught me many things, including how to depend on people you don't know, and how to survive without the technology.

Assemblies and guest speakers were a Break from the Monotony

great break from the daily monotony of school life. This year Senate planned and held two...

... assemblies, Homecoming and Prom. Each assembly had its own theme. "Homecoming centered around sports and was intended to get the student body excited for the upcoming games and dance," explained Mr. Andres, Jr., the senate sponsor. On the other hand, the Prom assembly in the spring focused on clubs and recognition. "We also put emphasis on making the juniors and seniors aware of the drinking and driving problem that happens around Prom," added Andres.

Senate put many hours into planning the Homecoming assembly. Planning began in early August at the retreat and continued until everything was ready for Homecoming week. Senior Kelly Beer and Junior Beth Klepper headed the assembly committee and made sure everything went according to plans. Junior Michelle Lamothe exclaimed, "The assemblies we have are always cool. Each time the themes are so unique and fun!"

Guest speakers were invited to the school so they could communicate their message to the whole student body in hopes of inspiring the way students lived their lives. Speaker Richard Santana came to many schools in the Denver-Metro area, including Columbine, to talk about diversity. Diversity Club and their sponsor Mr. Ivory Moore played a role in bringing him to Columbine. Moore stated, "We tried to get Santana to our school last May but that didn't work out, so we had him come in August. He also visited Dakota Ridge and Bear Creek."

Santana urged students to accept others for who and what they are and not make judgements based on racial or ethnical backgrounds. Santana especially emphasized the fact that people can change, regardless of their past actions. Junior Lindsay Conwell stated, "The assembly with Mr. Santana was enjoyable and entertaining. He had a good presentation and made a very good point." All in all, assemblies provided an educational experience for many students to learn about themselves and the world around them. Megan Minger

thing that you have learned,

explain, in detail, the greatest lesson.

You think you really want something in your life, and you are so sure that you know what you want is the best for you. What happens when you finally get what you want? Is what you wished for really the best thing? I wanted so much in my life: to leave my bad-tempered dad, move away from my stepmom Karen, and just live a better life. A perfect life. That perfect life was far away, in Colorado with my mom and grandma. But nothing is ever perfect. Lessons are the things you don't think about.

"Dad, I want to live with mom. I hate it here!" I yelled as we fought. Summer came. It was my day. I was leaving to Colorado to see Mom. I was so happy, another break from Karen, and time away from Dad. "Michelle, you come back with no problems you hear me!?" my dad demanded in his loud voice that always makes me jump. With my red cheeks and head spinning, I said, "Yes sir." There goes another lie. I got on the plane. "I love you Dad," I thought as the plane took off.

It was July the 26th, and I was to fly back to San Antonio soon. Well, that's what Dad seemed to think. The phone rang. I explained, "Well Dad, I'm not coming home. I love it here." My dad yelled at me and finally hung up. I hated it when he talked to me like that. Crying, I went to my mom. After a few weeks passed, I missed everyone. I wanted to go home. I wanted my old friends, my old school and my old cheer squad. I wanted my old life back. I wanted Texas. Most of all, I wished things with my dad were okay.

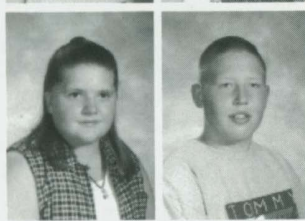

Four months later I still think about the choice that I made. I talk to my friends in Texas as much as I can. Things with my dad are much better. I hurt him and he hurt me, but we are talking. One day I hope that he can forgive me for any pain I caused him. I think the choice I made was a good one. However, if I could go back, I would have changed the way I made that choice. You have to think before you make choices. Study the choice, just the way you study for a big test. This is my life and my choice.

"We're not number five, not number four,

number three, number two.

We Are...Columbine

We're number one!" Cheers such as this echoed during tailgating and...

... spirit parties. Students writing "'99 Rules" on the window of a car using shoe polish, students conversely loudly while eating free food as they listen to a boombox, and students painting a blue and silver "C" on someone's cheek using face paint were all common at spirit parties and tailgaters.

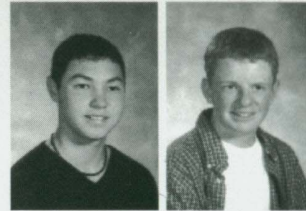

Tailgaters and spirit parties were designed as an incentive for students to attend sporting events and support their teams. In order to make this all possible, the Student Senate sponsored these organized events. The senators first got authorization from the senate advisor, Leland Andres, Jr., and Vice Principal, Maria Reschke. The sophomore and freshmen committees were responsible for holding spirit parties in the patio outside of the commons, while the junior and senior committees held tailgaters in a pavilion at Clement Park. The underclassmen committees generally had parties near the school because the majority of students could not drive to Clement Park or other places that events were held outside of Columbine.

All of the parties provided entertainment to excite the students as the game approached. Sophomore Senator Tim Matteson said, "Each party supplied food and entertainment, such as music and volleyball, so students would come to the party and then attend the sporting event afterwards." Free pizza, sub sandwiches, chips, candy, and pop were provided as refreshments for hungry students. Junior Matt Varney recalled, "I went to the parties because of the free food."

The turnout was usually good, with approximately thirty to fifty people attending. Many students chose to attend because they could meet their friends there and determine who was going to drive to the games. Junior Scott Schulte explained, "I liked the tailgating parties because they were fun and a good place to meet up with friends before the games".

Senate sponsored two or three tailgaters and spirit parties per semester. The students paid for the parties in the required class fees. Ryan Ishino

dedication

Losing yourself in the bright smile of a child gazing up at you performing on stage, you remember a time when you imagined one day embracing your dreams. It's about toiling away on your routines at early-morning Saturday band rehearsals (you wonder if practice does make perfect). It's about taking a Friday afternoon to sit in rush-hour traffic, your back seat loaded with sack lunches, as you attempt to give carefully-prepared meals to a few needy individuals. It's about inspiring your peers to join in on something that touches you so deeply you want to share your faith with them (early mornings suddenly became more appealing). It's about embarking on a journey within yourself, hoping to find ways to solve the OM puzzle (you never knew your mind could bend and twist so many ways before). It's about immersing yourself in a task that you love to do, and completing it with dignity, creativity, and compassion as you influence those around you. it's about dedication.

Community CHAT

Throughout the day, a student might go to Senate in order to create, Newspaper to report, Yearbook to document, Literary Magazine to entertain, or Forensics and Debate to act or express opinions. Each of these organized classes afford students the opportunity to manage activities and direct assignments all year long. The competition between these groups and corresponding organizations in other schools causes them to strive to have the most creative and unsurpassed product. Kristin Brown

Preparing to perform at a Forensics competition, Seniors Chris Beets and Nick Baumgart creatively practice their pieces, being sure to correct any errors. Forensics and Debate competed in three basic categories: public speaking, debate, and interpretation. photo by Courtney Reynolds

Concentrate and Organize CHAT

The bell rings and staff members of Newspaper meet around the couches to receive instructions, and they then separate to complete their assignments. While writers tackle interviews and stories, photographers take photos to accompany the copy. Editors concentrate on getting the paper ready for the upcoming deadline. Sophomore Christine Markert states she busies herself "writing...as well as taking pictures."

Every summer, Yearbook editors attend a camp to plan for the upcoming year. Editors make a rough copy of the coming year's annual using construction paper, magazines, and glue. At the beginning of school, the editors explain what the theme of the book will be and how the different sections are to be organized. Then the entire staff brainstorms ideas for stories. Staff member Katie Trojan comments, "When we were brainstorming ideas for the Student Life section, we had about thirty ideas written on the board!"

Every year, life as a student is made more entertaining due to efforts of Student Senate. Along with activities for the whole school, Senate has organized class spirit parties, upper-classmen tailgating parties, a ski trip, and an ice-skating party. Student Body President Heather Dinkel claims, "The most memorable event was our senior BBQ at the beginning of the year."

Senate also organizes several assemblies and every school dance.

Senior Pam Glazner is currently the Co-Editor-in-Chief of Newspaper. The experience she has helps to get the newspaper finished on time.

QHow many newspapers are published each year?

ATypically, we put out about six issues a year. We usually end up printing a couple of smaller ones too, depending on our budget and time.

QHow does one become a member of the Newspaper staff?

AA prospective person must take Journalism and then fill out an application which is submitted to Mr. Meier. He reviews it with the editors and makes the final decision.

QWhat is the process of putting the newspaper together?

AWe brainstorm possible stories and split into sections (News, Features, Sports, and Center). Requests are made and assigned and then two editors and Mr. Meier proofread three progressive copies. We import the stories onto layouts and proofread them. Then we take the paper in.

QAre the newspapers ever entered in any competitions?

AEvery fall we enter a contest where awards are given at CU Journalism Day.

Senior Andy Robinson has participated in Forensics all four of his years at Columbine and occupies the captain position of this year's team.

Q What do people do in Forensics?

A We participate in competitive events in areas of theater and public speaking.

Q How do students prepare for competitions?

A Some practice for hours, others don't. Some drink caffeine, others listen to loud music.

Q What skills help students be successful in Forensics?

A Public speaking, acting ability, and most of all they cannot be afraid to try new things.

Q How often and where are Forensics competitions held?

A Almost every Saturday in high schools around the Denver-Metro area.

Q What honors can be achieved in Forensics?

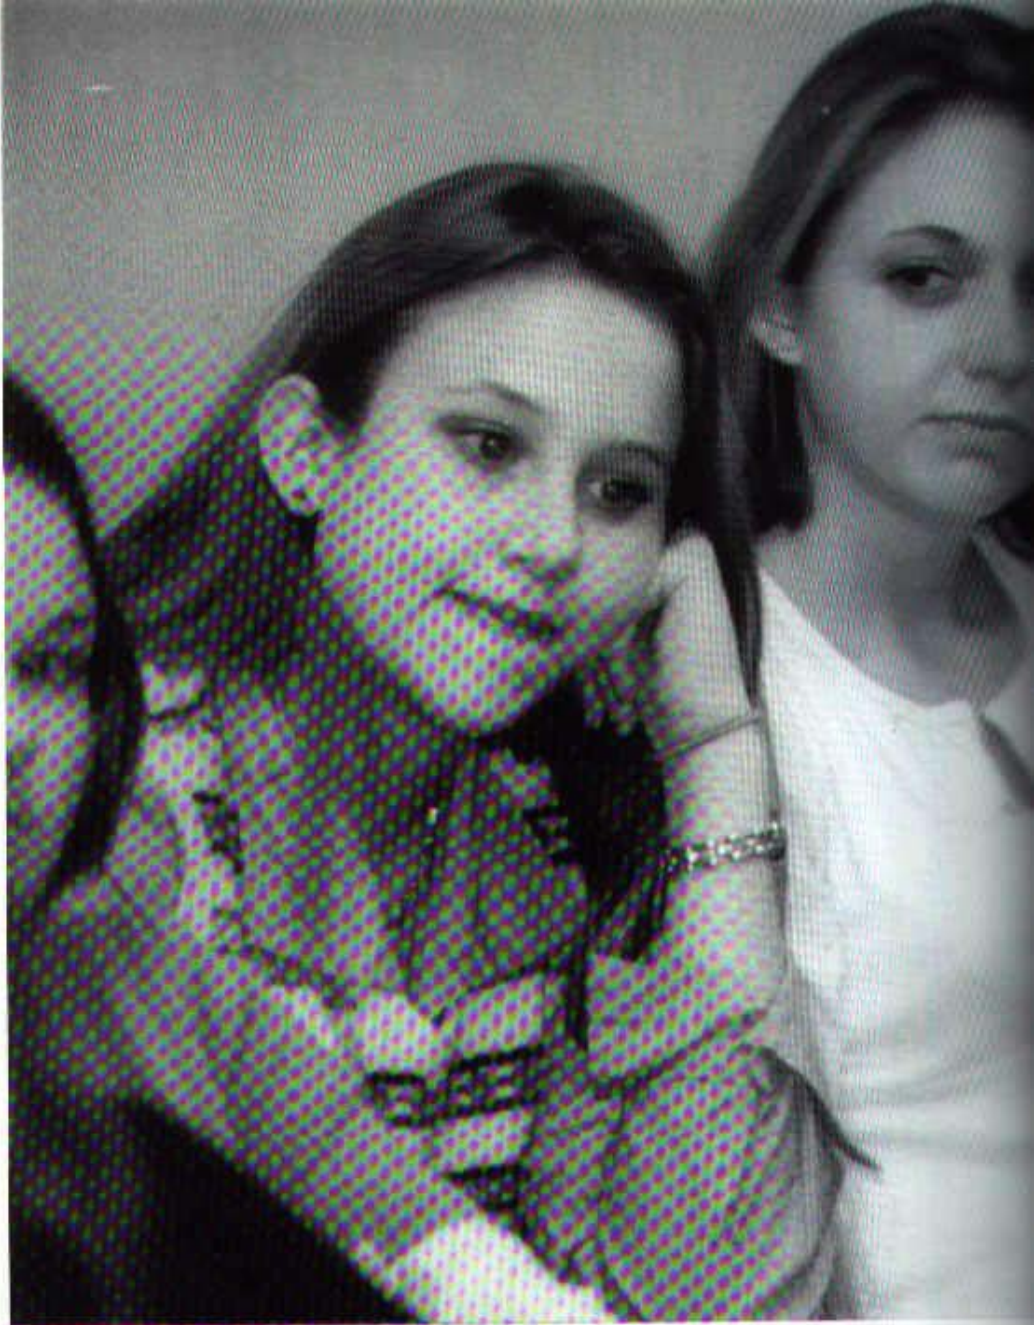

A You can letter, just like a sport.

Q Can anyone participate in Forensics?

A Yes, as long as they are willing to have fun and to compete on Saturdays.

Q What is a typical class period in Forensics like?

Brainstorm and Success CHAT

Several members of Literary Magazine anxiously await the announcement of this year's editors. One editor of the magazine, Mike Vendegnia, states, "I felt excited and nervous." Those who want to become an editor tell why they are possible candidates in a short essay to the instructor, who then shares the essays with the rest of the class and has everyone decide whom they feel will be a successful editor. Ms. Kelly makes the final decision.

Members of Literary Magazine go through a process of gaining ideas and combining them to produce a writing for publishing. They brainstorm for ideas or make a web of their ideas. Senior Leslie Burns, a member of Literary Magazine, claims, "I take an emotion from inside and describe how I feel as best I can." Writers then take their ideas and create pieces of writing. In order to be published, the writings must be reviewed by the student editors.

Students participate in either Forensics or Debate to demonstrate their speaking skills.

Both clubs participate in various competitions that are held throughout the year. Junior Sergio Gonzales comments, "Columbine has done exceptionally well this year." Forensics has also been successful this year in competitions. In Debate, students focus on speaking persuasively and in Forensics members learn to speak creatively.

Different Strokes DRAW

Art Club members enter the realm of famous artists; Bible Club members share opinions and faiths; dramatic performances by the fall play cast influence the audience; mind-boggling questions directed at Odyssey of the Wind members draw out their creativity and intelligence; open-minded posters made by Unity in Action promote diversity and cooperation. Through their participation in these clubs, many of these students attempt to make their mark on society. Kristin Brown

Sophomore Sarah Holton brings her motivation, enthusiasm, energy, and willingness to Art Club. All of these enhance her participation her first year.

Q What is the main function of Art Club?

A It is to gain school-wide interest in art and have a blast while doing it.

Q What are some of the activities that Art Club has done this year?

A We had a picnic, did Trick or Treat Street, and are planning a wicked Arts Attack Week.

Q Why do you think Art Club is an interesting and fun experience?

A I think art club is fun because we get to do many fun things and meet many interest- ing people.

Q How do the members of Art Club interact with each other?

A Once everyone gets past his or her differ- ences, we work together well.

Q What is your favorite part of Art Club?

A My favorite part of Art Club is the art, but meeting new people is also fun.

Q What activities do members participate in at meetings?

A We normally plan and organize events. Then we carry them out and have fun.

Showing off their acting talents, Seniors Brooks Brown and Christina Hildebrandt perform in the fall play Frankenstein, showing for two nights only. The fall play is always sponsored by Mrs. Caruthers and could not be put on without the help of the students and actors.

Bows and Skits DRAW

Differences. Varieties. Unique personalities. Students who unite in their love for diversity join together and brainstorm methods of increasing tolerance among teenagers. "In Unity in Action, we work towards increasing our knowledge by understanding each others' differences culturally and socially," states Senior Diwata Perez.

The silence seems to last for hours. The audience applauds. The bows are taken and the curtains close. The dressing rooms used for the Fall Play fill up with costumes. "In Frankenstein I got to work with the best cast and crew ever," states Senior Christina Hildebrandt.

The sound of voices can be heard as excited Odyssey of the Mind students brainstorm ideas to solve a problem. In competitions they use unique answers for mind-boggling questions and they perform skits. "It's about figuring out interesting and better ways to solve problems and to encourage creative thinking," exclaimed Junior Monica Schuster.

Thursday mornings become a time for students to share their religious beliefs and faiths with others. Meetings allow for prayer, song, and study. Junior Josh Ortwein comments, "Bible Club provides an opportunity for Christians from different churches to unite and bring glory to God."

Bravado and Support FEAT

Fifteen students peer upwards in the early morning as a brave individual ascends a pole at a nearby ropes course. The team-building skills the Peer Counselors acquire carry over into the counseling center where they help students through problems. The support team is composed of seniors who want to help their fellow peers through tough times. "I love working with our school and meeting new people" reflected Senior Annie Ford.

Students from National Honor Society fill the halls to prepare decorations for the annual Trick-or-Treat Street. As well as providing a safe place for younger kids to find candy, NHS offered a recycling drive and a sack lunch that provided meals for those in need. Whether they are decorating the hall or helping those less privileged, Honor Society always managed to aid the community.

As the sun rises over the Rocky Mountains, sixteen adventurous students begin their long hike to the top of one of Colorado's Fourteeners, Grays Peak. The intense climb of Grays Peak makes the hikers respect and appreciate the wonder that is nature. "It was a hard climb, but it was nice because it was our first Outdoor Club trip so we got to meet everyone," reflected Senior Ana Julia Ayala. Along with hiking, the club, composed of all seniors, went on camping trips, snow shoeing, mountain biking, and many other outdoor activities.

Throughout the Outdoor Club's inaugural year, Senior Bill Vandermeer has been an active and enthusiastic participant in the activities they've undertaken.

Q What was your favorite activity that you did this year and why?

A Camping in Colorado National Monument was definitely the best trip. It was only our second trip, so I got to know everybody.

Q How is Outdoor Club different than other CHS clubs and organizations?

A Well, it's a all-senior club and we decide on things as a group. Also, there is no club president.

Q How are the activities chosen?

A Mr. Webb chooses most of them and we come to a consensus on when we want to do them.

Q What made you decide to join Outdoor Club?

A It looked like a good way to experience the outdoors.

Q Why would Outdoor Club be a good club for others to join?

A We do a lot of fun outdoor activities: camping, hiking, rock climbing, snow shoeing, mountain biking. It is a lot of fun for everybody, even if you don't do a lot of outdoor activities.

Junior Deneé Taylor has been a member of Junior Civitan for one year. She's gained fulfilling experiences and friendships in the club.

QWhat are the Junior Civitan meetings like?

AWe have a good time while we discuss what we will be doing for the upcoming project.

QHow is Junior Civitan organized?

AWe do not really have an agenda, but sometimes people are assigned things to do outside of the meetings.

QWhat are the requirements of Junior Civitan members?

AIn order to be a member of Junior Civitan, you must have a willingness to work and sacrifice your time. You also need to have a readiness to participate and help others.

QWhat kind of activities does Junior Civitan normally do?

AWe do fund-raisers and help our community out.

QHow do you think Junior Civitan will help you prepare for the future?

AOur people skills are developed and we learn how to work in groups.

QWhat do you enjoy most about Junior Civitan?

AWe are friends and enjoy spending time together.

Toy Drives and Walking FEAT

"Junior Civitan is a club that is in charge of different fund-raisers and activities that help the less fortunate people in the community," explains Sophomore Eli Hancock. One of the many activities that Junior Civitan does is their yearly toy drive. The toys collected are given to children in hospitals. The club's newfound legacy of helping the community was developed by a group, led by two seniors, who set the stage for those who will follow.

With their running shoes laced up, seven Key Club members begin the Aids Walk in an effort to do their part in fighting the deadly disease. Along with participating in the annual Aids Walk, Key Club also partakes in many other activities that benefit the community. "I was amazed by all of the different kinds of people that were at the Aids Walk," comments Sophomore Andrea Launer. The dedication and hard work that this year's Key Club members put forth will be left behind for the upcoming members to challenge.

Key Club members also participate in "map projects," where the students venture to different elementary schools to paint maps of the United States of America on the playgrounds. The projects took place over a period of two consecutive Saturday mornings and the Key Club members met in the student parking lot to carpool to the school. This gave members the opportunity to provide a service to the youth of the community.

Keepin' It REAL

Active participation and experience are a major part of business and family and consumer studies clubs. DECA, FBLA (both representing business), FCCLA (representing family and consumer studies), and WES (representing intervention services) teach students business skills, responsibility, and help them learn to work with people. The qualities these students acquire and develop by joining the clubs will be applicable in later years as they enter the "real world." Kristin Brown

Hot Springs and Speakers REAL

Responsibility and dedication. That is what the Family and, Community and Career Leaders of America learn and use every day of their lives. "FCCLA is not an average after-school activity. I have found that the more I put into the club, the more I get out of it," recalls Christine Bell. They discuss ways to prepare for the future, whether they should remain at home or step into the business world.

Members listen intently as the motivational speakers stand on stage and give inspirational speeches. The eight members of the Future Business Leaders of America are at UNC in Greeley to learn how to better themselves as officers. Around the campus they hear lectures on more effective ways to lead meetings. "FBLA is more than just being in business. We meet a lot of new people and have a lot of fun," says Athena Lagos.

The members of the Work Experience and Study Club walk the streets of downtown Denver looking for items on their list. As part of their scavenger hunt, they find a statue, a price of a movie, and what is showing at the Denver Civic Center. The club is designed to help the individuals get more involved with their community and learn real-life skills. They also hold fundraisers and spend hours doing volunteer services to help the neighborhood. "WES helps the students connect to the community," says Mr. Rudy Martin, the sponsor.

Senior Chris Cowles is the secretary of DECA. He has been a member of the club for two years, and this year he contributed to every aspect of the club. His outgoing personality helps create interesting moments in DECA.

Q What is your role in DECA?

A I am the secretary.

Q What was the most memorable moment this year?

A My favorite event was when Louis Scileppi dressed up as a girl and performed a skit with me at the Tivoli in front of about 1,000 people. It was part of a role-playing event for a marketing convention and he played the part of a blonde bimbo that was on a "Singed Out" competition.

Q Why did you decide to join DECA?

A I joined DECA at first because I thought that it would look good on college resumes. When I got involved with the club I learned that it was a good life experience. I have learned a lot about the world of business.

Q How do you get into DECA?

A If you are in a marketing class, you are automatically a DECA member. It just depends on how involved you choose to be.

Music is, no doubt, a powerful form of communication. The musical notes are accentuated by each beautiful voice of coed Blue and Concert Choir, girls-only Belles, guys-only Freight, Women's Chamber Choir, and the musical instrument members. The members perform to a variety of audiences throughout the year. In each performance, a perfect combination of melody and harmony produces an elaborate collage of feeling, expression, emotion, and intensity. Kristin Brown

Concentrating on the lyrics, Seniors Veronica Jones and Brittny Burrows wear the uniform dresses of the Belles. Every year the Belles have a different style and color of dress instead of the standard choir robe. This year the Belles chose a shiny purple color. photo by Travis Hill

Senior Monica Dubois has been involved in Blue for one year. Last year, she participated in Belles.

QHow is Blue organized?

ATo be in Blue, you have to try out. When you try out, Mr. Andres takes scores and picks the people with the highest scores. There are an equal number of spaces available for girls and guys.

QHow many people are involved in Blue?

AThere are 24 people involved.

QHow much time is spent practicing?

AWe practice every day and a few times over the summer.

QWhat are the performances like?

AMost of the gigs are after school and when we perform by ourselves we try to perform for about 25 to 30 minutes, but when we perform with the other choirs, we usually only sing three songs. We normally perform at country clubs, nursing homes, elementary schools, and sometimes we perform at church functions.

QWhat kind of costumes do you wear when you perform?

AGirls wear 80's-style blue dresses with puffy sleeves and the dyeable shoes. Guys wear cummerbunds and bow ties.

Fifties and Oklahoma CLAP

Over 100 students stand under the spotlight in the auditorium and open their mouths to produce music. Their voices speak in African and sing the song "Osinfunimungu." "The Atmosphere in Concert Choir is one of fun, unity, friendly competition, and intensity. The sound is gorgeous, Mr. Andres' sense of humor is inspiring, and it's all something we can be proud of," stated Senior Ben A. Smith.

"Blue is a show choir that meets sixth hour every day. We sing all sorts of songs ranging from swing to fifties classics. We perform at various places throughout the year, including local elementary schools and nursing homes. It is enjoyable to come to school day after day," explains Senior Steve Vaughan. Blue creates an enjoyable environment with their rhythmic voices and carefully choreographed movements, while dancing with partners to this year's 20's theme.

The curtains open and the cast of Oklahoma performs four nights in a row. Two nights are designated to cast A while the other two are designated to cast B. Two casts provided more opportunities to students who wanted to participate. Junior Shannon Sykora, who plays a major role in cast A, describes, "The Musical is my favorite time of year! It is so much fun to get together two nights week with all of my friends to practice."

Exposure and Grace CLAP

Walking into the doors of the choir room during third hour, 40 girls sit and allow the notes of the many different songs absorb into their heads so they can later show their beautiful voices. Helping teach the difficult notes to the students, student teacher, Ms. Jans not only offers her help and devotion, but also offers her strategies and experiences. "Women's Chamber Choir is an experience I'll never forget," described Junior Dawn Bush.

"Belles has been a wonderful experience for me. It's a challenge to get up and come here at 6:45 in the morning and be expected to sing your best, but it's definitely worth it," states Junior Christine Bell. Singing the tunes of songs from the 40's and 50's, Belles allows audiences from nursing homes to elementary schools to experience the wonderful melodies and gracious movements of the girls in the maroon dresses.

Every Tuesday and Thursday from 6:50 until 7:25 the choir room is filled with a group of guys, known as Freight, who belt out the low notes of the humorous songs picked by Mr. Andres, Sr. Performing between fifteen to twenty times a year, the guys, dressed in black pants, black shoes, and suspenders with funny buttons on them, stand and amuse different crowds by singing the ever popular "Twelve Days After Christmas," "Rudolph The Red Noise Reindeer," and, unique to this year, "The Allergy Tango."

Capturing the attention of the auditorium, Senior Scott Rathbun and Junior Charlie Simmons lean on each other while singing the amusing words of a popular Christmas carol. Singing carols, such as "Rudolph the Red Nose Reindeer," was a tradition for Freight. photo by Travis Hill

A group of girls in Women's Chamber Choir harmonize during a performance. The choir stood on bleachers during concerts and wore long robes to unify the group in appearance, but daily practice was the key to unite them in song. photo by Travis Hill

Grabbing his suspenders to accentuate and exaggerate the lyrics of the song, Junior Kevin Koeniger stands beside Senior Everett Wolfe. Freight was known for their comical songs and movements and was usually a favorite of audiences. photo by Travis Hill

Junior Aaron Hancey has donated his music ability to Freight for one year. He offers a different point-of-view on the choir experience.

Q What will you remember most about being in Freight?

A I will always remember singing with a bunch of guys making fun of a bunch of different songs. I'll always remember our morning discussions; the guys know what I'm talking about.

Q What is the practice schedule like?

A We practice twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 6:50 to 7:25 in the morning.

Q What kind of relationship do you have with the other people in Freight?

A We are a bunch of really good friends doing something we really like and having a lot of fun doing it.

Q What would you like people to know about Freight?

A That we are a bunch of guys who have fun singing and making fun of songs.

Q How do you think others perceive Freight?

A A group of guys in tuxes and suspenders with funny buttons all over them that go out and just cheer people up and try and make them laugh.

Putting It Together TEAM

A myriad of instruments or selected songs enable students in Wind Symphony, Concert Band, Jazz Ensemble, Percussion, and Winter Guard to either exercise their respiratory ability or hand-eye coordination as they customarily perform to a smaller, perhaps more private, audience. Participating students appreciate the opportunity to improve their talents. Each of these band-affiliated groups is offered second semester to help students continue with their study of musical art forms. Kristin Brown

Marimba and Opened Eyes TEAM

The faces of talented and eager instrumentalists greets Mr. Biskup as he prepares to sculpt and harmonize a piece of music that lies before them. The atmosphere is friendly and inclined to work or, as Sophomore Jocelyn Heckler says, "chaotic." Sophomore Anna Dismang adds, "Everyone in the group is working hard and playing beautifully." Wind Symphony members agree that the hardest and most intricate songs have the best output.

Colorful flags and electrifying costumes mingle with the nineteen members of the Winter Guard as their languid movements fall in sync with notes of the soundtrack. Rehearsals allow participants to focus on the musical inspiration. After weeks of preparation, they are ready for competition in Dayton, Ohio. "The audience is right there, and it gives you more adrenaline. It's like you're performing to them, not the stadium," describes Junior Kirsten Young.

At ease in the band room, the five students in Percussion poke fun at each other. Due to the small class size, a friendly atmosphere fills the room. An incredible opportunity for intense learning awaits the members; they learn how to play instruments such as the xylophone, bells, chimes, and other forms of percussion. "Hanging out with my friends and making music is what I love to do so the class is agreeable," Junior Dan Goin admits.

Freshman Matt Davis is playing the trombone in Wind Symphony for the first time this year. He gives an objective and excited perspective of the experience.

Q What is Wind Symphony all about?

A It is about people meeting first period and playing music to get better at being a musician. The requirements are to practice on your own time and not in class. The competition is schools against other schools. To become a member, you have to play a piece of music for the test, which decides whether you're a member and what chair you're in.

Q How are competitions judged?

A They are judged over the piece of music and how difficult it is. Judging also covers dynamics, right notes, timing, and, overall, how well it sounds.

Q What about this year's Wind Symphony makes you glad you joined?

A It's a lot of fun and it's very challenging for me because I am first chair which is the best. I also like the group of people.

Q What do you learn or draw from wind symphony?

A I learn how to play better and use the dynamics more seriously. I met more friends, too.

As an oboist in her fourth year of being a Concert Band member, Kim Wollenberg speaks about the band.

QWhat does Concert Band entail in terms of requirements, practice, and competition?

AOur grade is based on attendance at school rehearsals and concerts, and we are required to attend at least four pep bands. We only have two competitions—one is the Columbine Festival, and the other is in Kansas City.

QWhat is Concert Band's level of difficulty?

AIt's lower than Wind Symphony and higher than Marching Band.

QHow is Concert Band organized?

AIt goes from first chair to how many people play the instrument. The first chair gets to play solos in the songs we play.

QHow are competitions judged?

AThere are usually three judges who rate you on a scale of one to five based on how well you play—your dynamics, instrumentation, accents, etc.

QHow are songs chosen to play?

AMr. B. usually picks them. We never play the same song twice. They're mostly contemporary.

In order to ensure the clearest tone possible, Freshman Ryan Bigley maintains perfect posture, while playing his trumpet in Jazz Ensemble. Due to the importance of poise while playing their music, many students improved their posture by participating in band.

Euphony and Half-moons TEAM

Percussion, brass, wind and string instruments combine to form the driving cadence in each Jazz Ensemble session. Eight students poise beside their desired "musical machine" and begin to play. The resulting euphony can be attributed to the sounds of the brilliant, concise trumpet, melodic saxophone, rhythmic guitar, harmonizing piano, and pace-setting drum. Each member finds his or her "spotlight" as a solo is proposed.

As a small-sized group, Jazz Ensemble members find they easily adjust to the type of music being played. "The Jazz Ensemble is more of an introductory band. It lets students who are new to playing instruments get into the groove of playing in a jazz group," explains Junior Ryan Shwayder. As they learn new fingerings, dynamics, instrumentation, and tempo, participants have a chance to bond with their fellow musicians.

Mr. Biskup stands, holding his baton in midair, in front of the half-moon arrangement of chairs. Practice begins with a warm-up and tuning. "Then we play through our songs and get yelled at," Freshman Nicole Boudreau jokes. As a result of each person's zeal and perseverance, a masterpiece can be presented. "Concert Band has improved so much this year and it is amazing how much dedication everyone has toward being the best they can be," concludes Sophomore Shanna Geslin.

After three years of playing the violin for Columbine High School, Junior Diana Tully is one of the most experienced and advanced players in Orchestra.

Q What will you remember most about Orchestra?

A I will probably remember Mr. Biskup and his one mistake a week.

Q What is the practice schedule like?

A We meet fourth hour and play different songs every day as a group. We play a variety of music and that is what makes it fun.

Q Looking back on the three years you have been in Orchestra, what is one outstanding memory that will stick with you for your life?

A I will remember playing with the Concert Choir the most. They were louder than us and really good. I always look forward to playing with them.

Q What is the relationship you have with the other people involved in Orchestra?

A My best friend is in there with me. We also have a German exchange student. All of us get along really well.

Q What would you like people to learn about Orchestra?

A It is not as boring as it looks.

Latin and Sax BEAT

The saxophone, trombone, trumpet, drum, piano, guitar, and bass all combine together to make the sounds of swing music come alive. The Swing Dance brought the community and school together to share the thrill of swing dancing. "The dance was a great idea, hopefully next year more people will participate," replies Mr. Biskup, Jazz Band sponsor. Jazz Band provided the live entertainment which made the event more "swingin'."

Members of Jazz Band not only play swing music, they also concentrate on rock, funk, and Latin music. Practicing every 7th hour, the band learns a new piece of music in two to three days. The group "has a lot of fun but learn a lot about the jazz style of playing at the same time," Senior Jason Thompson states. Jazz Band usually has three to four performances a semester, which allows for the group to show off all of their hard work.

Sounds of string instruments form together to make a sound of a full orchestra with only thirteen people. The violin, viola, cello, and bass, combine together to play classical music.

Freshman Ian Palju feels, "Orchestra has a good group of people that work well together." Orchestra members have a better understanding of classical music after studying it for four years. The Concert Choir and the Orchestra join during the spring to play and sing as one.

Without ever rehearsing together, they put together a flawless performance.

Technique and Bonding BEAT

During a Color Guard performance the only thing on people's minds is to "have fun and to succeed at what they do," comments Junior Pam Heckendorn. Color Guard enhances the music while Marching Band plays. Practicing anywhere from 15-20 hours a week, the group develops a tight bond of friendships. As an instructor for five years at Columbine, Kenny Bailey brings dance, theater, and the creative use of equipment into his experienced teaching.

Not only does Marching Band consist of playing music, the members have to "memorize their music and know where they have to be in a piece at the same time," says Freshman Anna High. Having to learn certain marching techniques, the band has to gather together on Saturdays to practice. Bringing 120 people together on a Saturday calls for dedication and commitment from all of the people.

Before performances, the Marching Band goes through rigorous drilling on their pieces of music. The idea behind their unique outfits was to make everyone look similar. This allowed for the audience to concentrate on the music and the formations rather than on the people individually. Going through "long and hard practices really pays off and shows itself in our performances," comments Junior Barbara Schneider.

Senior Catherine Nelson has been in Color Guard for four years. Her positive attitude and her leadership give her an interesting perspective on the sport.

Q What will you remember most about Color Guard?

A I will remember performing the most. I will also remember the in-describable feeling you have before going on.

Q When were the practices?

A We practiced every day, first hour. On Tuesdays and Thursdays we practiced rigorously after school, along with Saturdays.

Q When you look back on the four years you have been in Color Guard, what is one out-standing memory that will stick with you for life? Why?

A I would have to say state last year. We all went out on the stage and gave the performance of a lifetime.

Q Is the team's relationship a healthy one?

A We are like sisters. We are all closely connected.

Q What would you like people to learn about Color Guard?

A Guard is a demanding sport that requires a lot of dedication, but the experience lasts a lifetime.

guts

It's about sinking that game-tying three-pointer when there's one second left (and then having to return to the court for fifteen additional minutes of heart-pounding play). It's about pushing yourself past "the wall" (in an excruciating battle of mind versus body) but not managing to beat your rival to the finish. It's about pulling yourself through the water, arms and legs screaming in pain (the last set is always the hardest). It's about devoting twenty hours per week and four years of your life to a sport you love (all for a measley five minutes of playing time). It's about executing the perfect bump, set, spike sequence (now you understand the true importance of teamwork). It's about tagging your opponent out when it's the bottom of the ninth. It's about finding a hole in the opposing defense and rushing for first down. It's about putting for birdie, serving an ace, pinning your opponent, and sticking your landing. It's about putting yourself on the line to savor the sweet taste of victory (and the bitterness of defeat). It's about courage, hard work, perseverance, and heart.

"Teachers please excuse the varsity football players from class at 1:45." At around 1:50 the players arrive at the locker room to change. The biggest game of the year, against the Bear Creek Bears, is just around the corner. Promptly at 2:10 everyone, including coaches, meets in the wrestling room to watch the end of the movie The Edge. The movie was chosen because the men in the film kill a bear, hence the Bears. Time comes to load the buses, and suddenly the talking stops. The whole bus ride to 6th and Kipling is silent. As they warm up, the players chant in unison. Everyone is getting pumped up for the game. Finally, the time comes to meet the other team for the coin toss. As they walk to the center of the field to greet the ref, they hold hands. The game starts and everyone lines up on the side of the field. Shouts of excitement come from the first play of the game. The defensive line runs off the field and over to Coach West to review a future play. The cheers get louder and louder as the Columbine score keeps rising. Coach Lowry sketches another play on the white board for the offensive line. "Keep your hands up," yells Coach West to the defense. Coach Andres walks around with headphones on to talk to the other coaches in the booth upstairs. "Great job," he yells. "Keep it up." The game continues with thrilling excitement and stress. The managers give water to the players. Rather than drink the water, they pour it on their heads. The clock starts to run out, and coach Lowry puts the second defensive line in the game. The victorious players sing the fight song with the honor of being a Columbine Rebel.

Jump serve, dig, spike, side out in order to Score

"Come on Girls!" The music begins and the Rebel volleyball team runs out onto the court. The cheers of the crowd boost their spirits and get them into the game. They make a short salute to their fans and continue on. The team divides into two groups that run opposite ways around the court. Underneath the net their hands meet as they give each other high fives. They continue running until they have formed two lines. Each girl sprints to the net and jumps up above it to practice the big spike she will get in the game. They make their way around the court and dive into a circle. They lay together, shoulders touching, with the excitement growing by the second, and begin to pound their hands on the ground. The emotion can be felt all the way to the top of the bleachers. Suddenly one girl flips her legs over her head and does a back somersault. The next girl repeats this routine and so on until every girl is on her feet. They grasp hands and scream as loud as they can, "Ahhhhhh, Rebels!" The girls release hands and begin their final stretch of warming up before the game. They practice their serves, their sets, and then group back together to receive the final pep talk before the game begins. Each coach makes her final talk and explains the other team's weaknesses. The Rebels fire themselves up, clapping and cheering, and then head out on the court to begin on their road to victory.

Working to pace each other, Sophomore Evan McClaugherty and Senior Chris Jung breathe rapidly as they approach the one-mile mark. Cross country runners raced a variety of different courses throughout the season, causing their times to fluctuate. photo by David Proctor

Speeding through the darkness of the shaded trenches, Junior "Mad Dog" Mike Sheehan runs at Dekovend Park. Beginning with training over the summer, the runners were able to excel because of the amount of time they spent training. photo by David Proctor

Concentrating on running the best race possible, Sophomore Hannah Sheely challenges herself by putting her complete effort into it. Every 3.1 mile race provided a challenge to the runners due to hills, creeks, and many other obstacles. photo by Chris Clary

Grasping the grass with all her strength, Sophomore Shanna Geslin struggles to overcome the slippery mud wall at the Arapahoe Invitational. This was the first meet of the season, and it showed new runners what cross country was all about. photo by Chris Clary

With a valiant effort to be the best they can be, cross country runners battle the odds by persevering, scaling, climbing, and getting a head-start at each meet. clockwise from top: J. Brinkley, M. Sheehan, E. McClaugherty, J. Brinkley, H. Sheely, K. Mohrbacher.

To run the distance is to achieve the goal.

Strength

"6.06! 6.07! 6.08! 6.09!..." screams Coach Havens as the runners experience lactic fermentation in their muscles—well, actually, they feel their breath becoming harder, their legs tightening up, and every muscle in their bodies aching and screaming for them to stop. Do they stop? No, they just push themselves harder. Hosting the state-qualifying meet at Clement Park, Columbine cross-country runners run one of the most difficult courses and run it with Rebel pride. After taking a 20-minute warm-up run, some girl runners gather around in a circle and pray for success. "Dear Lord, thank you for bringing us all here today. I want you to be with us all in the moment that we've been waiting for, worked for. Let it show through our race and let us keep strong and be able to finish that course but let it hurt because we know if it didn't we wouldn't be satisfied," prays Sophomore Michelle Sabey. "Lord give us the strength physically and mentally and let us make it though this race and accomplish our goals today. Help us make it up that mountain and let us be the Rebels we are!" exclaims Sophomore Shanna Geslin. As the prayer continues around the circle of girls, words of strength and power come into their minds. As the race begins, everyone places themselves at a good cheering spot; whether it is at the beginning or the end does not matter. The runners hear the chants and motivating words of the spectators, but most important, they hear the times screamed out by Coach Havens on the tip-top of dreaded Mount Columbine. "6.10! 6.11! 6.12! 6.13!..."

Tumble across the floor, stick the landing, maintain perfect

Balance

It is time to load the bus that will take the gymnastics team to Chatfield for their meet. They all file on. Some are tired, some are nervous, and a few are both. Once the bus is loaded, Coach Rhonda Lambert takes roll. The meet they are headed to is a varsity meet, but Lambert seems delighted at the number of JV gymnasts who have come to watch the meet and support their fellow teammates. They are all excited, but they slowly get quiet as Lambert gives her pep talk. "Hey you guys, you know you can beat all these teams tonight, and you have learned a lot of new tricks lately. If you can stick the routines, you could score in the 170s tonight. You are really close to that already. I want to see lots of straight legs and pointed toes." After the pep talk Lambert passes around a list of the gymnasts who are to perform. While each girl looks at the list, a group of the girls snack on Apple-O's in the front. The ride to Chatfield is finally over. The girls unload the bus with all of their equipment in their hands. Upon entering the gym, Coach Rhonda Lambert designates the team's gathering area. After everyone puts their sleeping bags and snacks on the floor, Lambert shouts out, "Get ready girls, warm-up is in 10 minutes." Since the team is bigger this year than last year, Lambert divides the team into two smaller teams. This allows for more one-on-one attention from the different coaches and more time on each individual apparatus. Warm-up time is over and the girls are ready to compete. The last words of wisdom are given by Lambert.

Reaching for the stars, Sophomore Margaret Burns performs her floor routine. Gymnasts were given a one-minute twenty-second time limit for the length of their routine. Music for the floor routines was carefully chosen as routines were choreographed. photo by Aaron Wright

Remaining steady on the beam, Freshman Elaine Miller strikes a pose while doing her routine. Many gymnasts found the beam to be the most difficult apparatus because perfect balance was required to keep from slipping off the four-inch surface. photo by Aaron Wright

Starting her floor routine, Sophomore Lauren Greene assumes her beginning position. Proper starting position was crucial, as it could give the judges a good first impression, resulting in a higher-scored performance on the apparatus. photo by Aaron Wright

The sun pokes out from behind the clouds onto the softball field where the Rebel softball team is attempting to make it to the state tournament. "Good throw," states Senior Kristi Held as she receives a strong toss from a teammate. The team is lined up in rows tossing the ball back and forth between each other. Their passes look strong and help them to get into the right mood for the game. When they finish with this, the players spread out on the field into their correct positions. Then, Coach Sanders hits a ball hard into the outfield. The outfielders fire the ball back in to the basemen, who then toss it around the bases to warm up. Meanwhile, on the side, pitcher Junior Jolene Headrick warms up with Coach Baldwin. Soon, catcher Senior Amber Burgess takes over and Headrick fires pitches away at Burgess. The excited teammates cheer each other on every time a good catch or pass is made. Coach Bath watches intently, checking to make sure that the team is warmed-up and ready to play in the qualifying game. They show their spirit and try their hardest to shrug off the pressure of a state-qualifying game. The other team takes the field to warm up, and the players feel the pressure increase. They do a loud, excited cheer and with one last pep talk from Coach Bath, they take off running onto the field proudly to try to bring their school the glory of participating in the state softball tournament.

After the bell rings at the end of the school day, the tennis players meet in the parking lot by the basketball courts at Clement Park. While they wait for the others to come, they argue over who is going to drive up to Green Mountain High School for the upcoming match. The players are accustomed to driving to away games on their own because they do not have a team bus like other sports teams do. In addition, none of the players have athletic lockers; they must put on their tennis shorts and t-shirts in the parking lot. Upon decision of who is to drive, the players load into the cars to travel to the match. The atmosphere in the cars is very relaxed, but they are focused on the match ahead of them. In Matt Cornwell's car, four players decide to sing along with the songs on the radio. The song of choice in this particular car is "Cupid" by 112. They sing very loudly as they try to remember the words of the song. On arrival to their destination, the players appear confident. Before warm-ups begin, they decide to walk around the school and use the bathrooms. As they walk back to the tennis courts outside of the gymnasium, the players concentrate on their match and practice on their own. Most players prepare by playing "pinball" and volleying back and forth to another teammate. At this point, the player introductions are about to begin, and the team lines up in a row opposite the other team.

"I told you last night, 215-220 we're going to state. You know how to play the game of golf and I'm not telling you anything you don't already know any better than I do. Give it a shot and play your game. Don't try to do things you're not capable of doing. Take your par round. A guaranteed three par round from you guys and you're going to state. You know that and everyone is capable of shooting that," Coach Marshall encourages. The words of Coach Marshall linger with golfers Senior Jason Rauzi, Juniors Luke Crawley and Travis Morton, and Sophomore Ryan Stephens during the state-qualifying tournament at Indian Tree Golf Course. While warming-up, the technique of each golfer would astonish any new viewer. Seeing a small white ball disappear in the sky to miraculously fall past the 200 yard marker is pretty amazing. One would wonder how the sharp-eyed golfers could keep track of their ball. After warming up the boys polish up their clubs, change their shoes, and ready themselves for "a long day," states Travis Morton. On the other hand, Crawley looks at the day in a whole other way. He states, "I've popped out of my cocoon. I'm ready to be a butterfly! Today's gonna be fun." As the guys gather around the first hole, each player introduces themselves to their group of four. Beginning at hole number one and walking all the way the eighteenth hole, the players walk in a concentrated silence of determination.

5:45 p.m. on a Wednesday night, totting their equipment bags, the boys soccer team boards the bus, ready for another game. Each goalie takes his seat, fourth one from the front, and the other boys file in behind them. As the bus pulls into traffic, Senior Justin Carlson asks, "Who's got the CD's?" Junior Joe Marino pulls out his CD's and hands them to Carlson. He then puts on Korn's "Got the Life." The boys all start to get pumped up. Cries of laughter are heard from the back of the bus, as the guys crack jokes and sing along with the music. The team is obviously in a good mood and excited about the game. Goalies Marino and Sophomore Ben Oakley talk about how they hope this game will be another shut out. Coaches Peter Horvath and Dave Smith sit in front discussing the opponent's strengths and weaknesses and make predictions about the game. Soon, the music changes to Wyclef Jean's "Gone 'Til November," and the guys continue talking about what they're going to do tonight. As the team nears the stadium, they start to get ready. Rammstein is now playing and the players are wrapping ankles and putting on their shin guards, cleats, and jerseys. Random shouts of "Pass me the tape!" and "Aspirin!" fill the air. The team starts to focus on what needs to happen. Every game is a step closer to their goal: state. Finally, the last song of the ritual play track comes on, MC Hammer's "Soft and Wet." All the guys sing along with the chorus, laughing. The bus pulls up along the side of the field, and Coach Horvath exclaims, "Let's do it!" The team piles out, psyched for the game.

"1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8." One of the captains, Senior Kelly Dickson, prepares her squad for the competition. All of the practices are behind them and it is now time for it to pay off. The girls gather around in a circle with their arms around each other while Dickson begins the prayer. "Dear God, let our dancing be the best it has ever been. May you be with us while we dance and transform us into our characters. Let us do our best and allow ourselves to show everyone what we've got." The girls are ready to go on stage in front of hundreds of people at the Denver Coliseum. Parents, fellow students, and coaches are there to support them. Earlier in the day, before the competition, they gathered together at Dickson's house to do make-up and hair. When they arrived at the Coliseum, one of the judges told the girls they could not have any glitter on their faces. In twenty minutes, the whole team had to take off their make-up and put new make-up on. All of the girls rushed to redo their make-up and be ready in time to stretch and to do a quick run-through of their program. Now, the atmosphere is tense as the girls wait to perform. The team is then announced to be on deck for the next performance. Everything they are about to do in a three-minute performance is running through their heads. Every movement and every mistake they are about to make will be critically judged and will determine their skill and ability as dancers.

Cheer

Suddenly, a mass of silver and navy blue rushes onto a mat in the gym. "5...6...7...8!" shouts a captain of the varsity cheerleading squad, starting the first rehearsal for the Columbine cheerleaders at the NCA Regionals. The cheers are given only a few minutes to run through their entire routine, which involves cheering, tumbling, and jumps. To save time, the cheers simulate tumbling passes by jogging across the mat. They also omit lifts and jumps, replacing them by getting into their formation and making quick arm movements similar to the way they will actually perform. After quickly running through their routine, the cheers have to move to the next practice area, which is on the other side of the gym. They stand in a line, ready to practice, while an opposing squad finishes its routine. Many of the cheers appear to be nervous, playing with the curlers that are still in their hair. Others seem to be excited and ready to demonstrate their skills. As soon as the other squad leaves the mat, Columbine's cheers hurry to take their positions in their first formation. Once again, someone starts the cheer off with a count. This time, several of the cheers tumble across the mat to warm up for their actual performance. They put more intensity into their rehearsal this time, as they near the competition. All of the cheers concentrate on perfecting their arm movements and being synchronized with their squad members. Several minutes later, their time is up. The cheers leave the mat and climb the steps to the top of the bleachers, where they anxiously await their chance to perform.

Making weight. Besides competing against his next opponent, this is the hardest task that a wrestler has to face. The night before a match, Senior Steve Burg conditions during practice to lose excess water weight and is one pound, at the most, over the weight limit. After practice, Burg only eats light foods so that he will not gain any unnecessary weight. The day of the match, if he is within the weight limit, he is allowed to sparsely eat light foods, such as rice cakes, fruits, and vegetables. The wrestler is very tired and fatigued throughout the entire day due to lack of fluids and energy. After school, Burg immediately goes home and rests or relaxes and prepares for the upcoming match. At around 6 p.m., the preparation for the match begins, and he officially weighs in. He no longer has to worry about his weight, and now he can finally eat food and drink water to regain energy. However, Burg cannot drink too much fluid because it will make him heavy and give him cramps. He is also cautious of what he eats because his stomach cannot handle too much food at a single time. After eating, he gets dressed as the coaches give a pep talk, and then warm-ups begin. Burg stretches out on the mats and tries to get some adrenaline pumped through his body so that he can have some energy during the match. After warm-ups, he waits until his weight class, 171 pounds, is called, and he finally competes. All of the deprivation and struggle for the last few days will finally pay off when he pins his opponent.

Coaches' voices sound as dozens of eager swimmers jump into the once-calm swimming pool. Although the stands are empty for now, the swimmers do not seem to mind. They are focused on only one thing: swimming. Just as they do before every swim meet, they warm up with their usual routine. The first swimmer to dive in quickly begins 200 meters of freestyle swimming. A few moments later, the next person dives in behind her and does the same. Once all of the swimmers have completed their first 200 meters, the first swimmer begins the routine all over, only this time, instead of swimming a stroke that was chosen for her, she swims 200 meters of the stroke of her choice. The same pattern is followed for their next 200 meters of warm-up, the Reverse Individual Medley. For the next 150 meters, the girls swim "drills." The drills are adaptations of different strokes which increase strength, in turn strengthening the strokes. For the latter part of warm-up, the swimmers practice their starts. Every Columbine swimmer does ten starts and follows each start with a sprint of 25 meters. After the last swimmer has completed her starts and sprints, the entire team quickly gathers in a small circle to mentally prepare for the upcoming meet. Some give helpful hints while others simply give words of encouragement. The meeting is finished with a loud and energy-filled cheer. As the Columbine pep cheer draws to a finish, the first swimmers step up onto their starting blocks, signaling the first step on the road to victory.

The soft hum of the crowd grows into loud and excited cheers as the boys' varsity basketball team runs into the energy-filled gym. Entering from adjacent doors, each half of the team sprints the length of the court and eagerly slaps each other's hands as the two lines cross paths. Turning in at half court, the groups quickly form two lines on each side of the court. The first player in line runs to the basket and practices a lay-up. While this is going on, the first player in the other line retrieves the ball from under the basket and passes it on to the next, anxiously-awaiting player. Alternating lines in this fashion, the team practices this move for about two minutes, until each player feels that he is sufficiently warmed-up. For the next few minutes, the team plays three-on-three to simulate game situations. During the precious time remaining, the players practice their shooting. Each player practices whatever he needs to work on, whether it be shooting three-pointers or simply making free throws. As the final seconds of warm-up draw to a close, players scramble to pick up loose balls, hoping to get in one last shot. The last seconds tick away and the inevitable buzzer sounds, signaling the end of warm-up. The players rush over to the bench and eagerly crowd around their coach, awaiting any last minute instructions. Just as the announcer finishes reading the names of the starters, the entire team gathers in a huddle for one last meeting before tip-off. The players make their way to their positions, and with a flick of the wrist, the ball is sent into the air for tip-off. The game has begun and so, too, has the journey toward triumph.

Two-one-two, man-to-man, full court press, free throw, lay-up, jump shot. These all are terms as common to the Lady Rebels as victory and pride. As the buzzer sounds the end of the third quarter, the girls seem to look up at the black scoreboard in unison to evaluate their standing; the score is 28 to 27, Chatfield. They exit the court and arrive at the team's row of chairs somewhat breathless, excited, and exhausted. Perspiration glistens on their faces, and looks of determination and optimism accompany them as they return for a few minutes of rest. Some of them stand and some sit as they gather around Coach Dave Sanders. While they wait for him to start his "speech," the girls salute each other with pats on the back, smiles, and "good jobs." Players pass around water bottles to each other, accepting them with grateful expressions. The water bottles are either used as ice packs on their foreheads or to abate the girls' thirsts, no doubt refreshing their fatigued bodies. "Some of you need to slow down; you're going to run yourselves to death. Stop letting them get quarter shots, and don't wait for me," advises Sanders. He continues with praises and guidance while the girls lean forward, listening intently amidst the loud conversation of the spectators. Sanders wraps up his comments as the time runs out. The girls look at each other with radiating smiles; they are pumped for the last eight minutes of play. They come together and raise their hands as if reaching for the stars and scream with triumph, "Rebels!" Armed with their knowledge, game plan, and skills, they return to the court to continue battling their rivals for the triumph of winning.

You have created your own formula for success.
Most people dream of unreachable dreams but your future is limited only by your imagination. We have watched you grow and mature with wonderment and pride. Your skills, wit, and humanity will guide you well. Use them for the good of all and look to the future with confidence.
Always remember that you have the love and support

Never forget that crazy summer, the happy times, the headache the next day. You know together we make the perfect woman. Thanks for the good times and the bad.

I have learned so much from the two of you. Life will take you where you want to go.

Love always,
Legs

Erin-

You have been the greatest. You have made my senior year a year to remember. Thanks for all the laughs and memories. I want to still know you when those dream guys come along. Enjoy your college years. Keep in close touch always.

You're the best,
Lindsey (Dody)

Emily,

Thank you for always being here when I needed you. You have made my last two years of high school very memorable and great. I hope that you will always be around to be with for awhile. If you ever need anything I will always be here for you no matter what happens.

Love always and forever.
Jason

Briar: Big guy! "You stay here mom, we'll check it out." Turkish prisons and pipebombs don't make good conversation starters. Good thing we got that limo for all you girls. Projectile bombs at New Happy. Bathrooms are a great place to say goodbye. I can't thank you enough for being there for me these past six years. I will miss you.
Love, Steve

J.. a.k.a.. My Hero.

Hey my girl! Don't ever forget out daily lunch. NY Bagel chats block butt shots. McDonald's fries under the bleachers and the "PACT!" You will go as far as you dream, which, for you, is out of this world! You, E. and me, three hot chicks out criusim. Don't lose touch!

Luv. Your "K"

J.J.~

Who knew French class and older men could have brought us this close? You have been there for me through everything in my life - thank you!

Not only are you the most beautiful person I know, you are the best friend I have ever had. We have had many memories and there will be even more to come. I love you!

Erin

3rd best man, The Curz, Kicking Caitlin's Fort, The Holy Days, Cigaaas, I never lose a game of chicken! Dynasty, the funniest night ever! Are these new pants? Eddie would wear those Mini Mart high waters. I'm huge on that. BOND, Nate Dogg. Your dances, Weinbarts. Saturday before Christmas was Mayhem! Moon buggy on Broadway. A story book ending.

Ben

I want to give thanks to all my boys for being there for me for all the years. (Dave, Donny, Derek, Kyle, Eric, Matt, Josiah, Brad, and Landon.) I will never forget the trouble we caused and the fun we had. (Camping, brawls, and stickin' up for each other.) Love you guys and you guys are like family and we will keep hangin' no matter what!
The Man,

Yo B -

Go Green Knight. I told you I would put you in the yearbook. Thanks for the memories . . . good luck with the band next year. Refrain from killing the runners, keep your baton and glasses intact and always surf those waves. Try not to sweat the small stuff.

From the seniors,
Charlie and Jocelyn

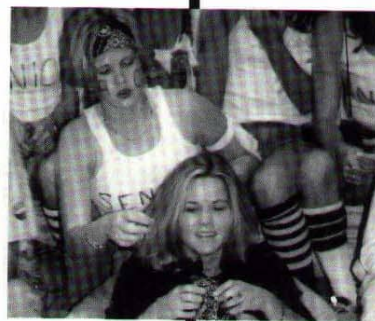

Kristin- Although we've had our differences, I'm glad we became friends. We have had so many memories, sixty words can't even say them all. Remember our perfect little neighborhood. All those days playing soccer in the front yard. Good luck in the future and everything you do. Love ya always-and have shared so many great memories: the dinky guy, tea parties, the 1st dock dance party, Minnesota, the ghost, Dakota. What am I going to do without you right across the street? Thanks for all the shoulders to cry on and all the smiles you gave to cheer me up.
Meghan

Love ya,
J.J.

Hey girls, I will never forget the Mary Kay party and when Michelle and I decided to throw our own party. She called me just the other day. I have yet to return her call. I only wish I would have become friends with you before half way through your senior year. You better call me when you go of and start a whole new life.
Courtney

Jer~
I never thought I'd find someone much like me! I've always loved you, "the hot guy across the hall in math!" You've taught me to be spontaneous but remembering to lay back and be fun. Whatever stands in the way I believe we'll climb it together. You'll always spark a smile on me that no one else can! My love will never fade!

I love you!
Lil' girl

Girls,
You guys are the greatest!
I'm going to miss you all, if you decide to leave for college. Good luck in the future. Follow your heart, and remember your dreams are what you make of them.
I love you girls, and keep in touch.

Love,
Tina (Teen Bean)

Amber~
You have so much strength and determination - I have always looked up to you. You are the best sister a girl could ask for. You are not only my sister but my best friend. Keep your head up and remain your kind and kind self. No matter what I am, I will be there for you. I love you!

Love,
Kelly

Michelle,
What can I say to sum up seven years of friendship?
Never forget the fun we've had and all the memories!
FLORIDA! "Is he taking pictures of us?" The vision concert, word games (adjective games), and of course the nine hour train ride (ugh!) and the guy making PBJ's. You will always be my best friend. OK here we come!
Love, Car

Chris~ I'll never forget 3rd hour my sophomore year. You were so nose-y. But look at us now, a year and a half later, together. Tad's b-day party is an event. I'll never forget. Your smile, eyes, and hands are what I love about you. They are the most gentle features you have; don't ever lose them.
Love always, Nicole

WhiteJenScotchTape,
There's so much I want to say but it's so hard to put seven years into sixty words. From British-Bulldogs at the party house to Kenny G & Pops, we've become best friends. I hate to see you go but you're graduating so I guess you'll have to.
The best had to have been summer '96. #35...need I say more?
Nainers

Mickey~ I'll always cherish: Daddy's fairytales, pound puppies, Hang on for Dear Life!, our play house, "The Game of Love," back-to-school sleep-overs, family vacations,
The Plan, stupid boys and your advice, friendship, and love. Your footsteps in faith and life guide and perfect me.
I cherish every moment and every memory. I love you always. We must be sisters, Stiney

London. You've given me seven years of the greatest memories a friend could hope for. The most one I can remember was when Jason & I were playing darts and threw a dart in my head. The fell off of your bike & sliced your open. The funniest memory: when were going to light a fire in front your house so we could play base night. It wasn't so much fun as your Dad caught us. Don't tell Jason, your senior year is coming soon enough! Thanks for being there Anytime, anyplace, anything you
I'll be there! Just don't ask for me
Friends to the end, Chris

RimmieWimmie~
We have had some awesome times so far along this journey. We have many more coming our way. I am never too far to talk to and never too far to listen. I will miss you sooo much but do not forget, we have someone awesome to trust. Keep your loving spirit and look upwards for guidance.
Shelly

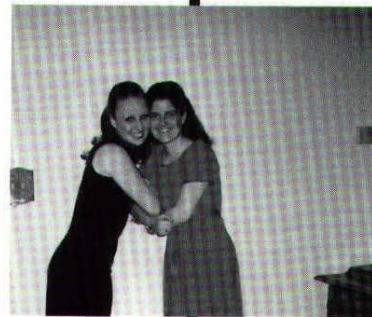

Pam,
I'm so proud of your success in high school... one of the many reasons that I'm proud to know you. Plus, I also get to your boyfriend. Not only do I see your enormous intellect, but also your sensitive, caring heart, which I'm so happy to have.
You are my red rose,
Brett

Katie,
I hope you know how important you are in my life. I couldn't have asked for a better little sister. I can only hope that I have been an older sister you could trust and look up to. We are so much alike it is no wonder we get along so well (and not so well)!
I LOVE YOU!

Love,
Kel

Janelle~
Thanks for always being there for me! We have always been each other's diaries, therapists, shoulders to cry on, and friends to laugh with. I will never forget all of the fun times, laughs, and long phone calls. Even though we'll be hundreds of miles apart next year, we'll always be best friends!
I love you!
Mindy

K-Buddy we have made it! These last four years have been great!
It is finally time to show ourselves to the world! Man - so many memories - butt profiles, wrestling, fighting over the same guys, Chilis, The Rose - Leroy, Baja Burn, etc. I know you will go places in life so reach for your dreams.
I love ya!
Erin

Jess Bess,
Seeing you graduate brings back memories of playing in house and Glamour Shots your basement, going to the Rod shows in 50's pool skirts, your first perm while swimming at Glenwood Spring tea at Brown Palace, camping at Wellington Lake, and stories about boyfriends!
been crazy growing up with you! We love you!
Lindsay and Emily

You are a good boy Logan Ray. You have been a great kid and I will treasure every moment.

Love,
Mom and Dad

What can I say? These past 2 1/2 years have been such a blast. I hate to see you go. Thank you for being there for me, and thank you for being you. I will miss you so much next year. Think of me from time to time and always keep the silly putty in mind.
Forever and always,
Jill Everlast

Dave, Luke, Lucas,
Matt, and Dave:
I don't know what I'll ever do without you guys. You all mean so much to me. I'll never forget all the good times we had and all you've taught me. From eating chimichangas after school, to our late night BBQ's in Clement Park, you've brightened my life.
Love always,
Ermin (Puck)

"My Girls" Wow! Girls'Night Out - not so many! HotTubbing! Partying
'till no end. Many lessons learned. Guys,guys,and more guys. Some good, some bad!
All of us have great tales to tell.
You have all been there for me at different moments. I couldn't have had a better four years without you guys! Thank you &
I love you! To be continued!
Bo Bow

Kitty-Cat~ Thanx for being there through all the stupid guys and everything else. You mean more to us than you realize. Remember driving to Broomfield at 4 a.m. and body launching to the ceiling?
The list goes on forever. We will always be there for you, even if we are on opposite ends of the country.
Love always,
Sabrina and Casey
P.S. Just remember you are going to be okay! But you can still call at 2 a.m. if you need a reminder!

Heather and Galina, you two are the greatest friends anyone could have. So many memories and so many laughs. I couldn't have survived this year without you guys.
Thanks for always listening and understanding. Thanks for putting up with me from day to day especially with the caffeine.
Don't forget about me! I love you both!!
Love always,
Megs

Mindy,
Having a friend like you is such a blessing and I cherish the many memories I have with you! I am going to miss you so much next year!
Nobody has ever been there for me the way you have or understood me like you have.
Thank you for everything, and I love you lots!
Love,
Janelle

María.
First of all,we'd like to say,
"ploff!" Thank you for being a great "new sister." We've learned so much and had so much fun.
Nos gustan los monos pero te (loca! loca!) gustan los... In all your years to come we wish you love and happiness. God loves you more than imaginable.
Love,
Michelle and Tinie

Shelly~ You're not only my big sister, but my best friend as well. Thank you for always being there for me. Shoot for your dreams and you will succeed in all you reach for. Keep your eyes on Jesus, trust Him always. He will never let you down. Good luck. Never forget who you are.
I love you Michele
KimmieWimmie

Jocelyn:
I am so glad that I met you. You are the best thing to come into my life. I will never forget you and I hope you will never forget me. Good luck in anything that you do in or with your life.
Love always~ Jason

Princess,
You are my strength, always the one to hold me up. Ever since we have shared theme parties and embarked on exciting summer days posing as the beautiful bathing beauties, I have looked up to you. I love you and admire you with all I am.
Forever your one true admirer,
Veronica

Dearest Laura: Well, here we are, finally. It seems like so long ago when that weirdo in Mr. Jordan's class waved at us and we were leaving notes in Mr. West's truck. We never know what life will bring us and that is scary. But you've been my best friend for as long as I can remember and you are amazing, wonderful, and irreplaceable. Through the best and worst times you've always been there and that means more to me than any boyfriends or FunPlex employees that may come along in the future.
'99 Baby!!
I love you and good luck!
Melissa

Sarah~
Thank you for everything, for being there, laughing with me, and for putting up with me at times. Since March 12, nothing has been the same between us and I hope it never changes. Yes, I know I'm whipped, but that's okay. I can't tell you what you mean to me. You are my pretty girl.
Love always,
Chris

Jess,
You have been a great friend through everything. I don't know what I would do without you. Remember long car rides to the lake, Cheeseburger in Paradise, sunflower bags, Tootsie Rolls and gummie bears. Gunther Toody's forever baby!
Love always, Sabrina

Boys: Thank you for patting me on the back until I threw up, giving me advice I will never take, and blaming your bad gas on me. Tee-peeing, Cuban Cigars, Truth or Dare, constant bad relationships, Guitar, Ringo Starr, Dancing...you have always stood by me. I love you guys. You are my heart, my soul, my best friends.
Always~ Les

Jason (Bebe): It's hard to believe it's been a whole two years. It seems like yesterday we were sitting at Zach's house watching "The Nutty Professor." You have made these last two years the best. I hope the next two are just as good. Good luck in college. I am very proud of you and I love you so much.
Love always and forever,
Emily (Omii)

from all of you! Lindsay~ thanks for the years of friendship! Steve~ never forget the leprechaun! Scott, Greg, and Jessica~ the car rides and wrestling! Scottie~ that wonderful voice! I will never forget any of you who touched my life and I wish you the best of luck!

Love,
Pam

Thanks for all the childhood memories and just being a big sister. Have fun at college, I'm sure I will. (Hah, hah. Not.) I will see you in the future.

Love,
Your baby sister,
Pauline

Girls: This is for the good ol' times that never leave. Thanks Julie and the rubber tubing in Chemistry; for music, scary scientist, and flat as a pancake; Christel and our lunch conversation; Ang for guac, guac, cheese, cheese, and every smile. Thank you all for making the memories I will never forget!
I love you!
~K~

Dear Carly and Michelle,
I can't tell you how much you guys have meant to me these past three years. You are so awesome! Always remember 3D, night vision, Gill Rush, ohh, ohh, ohh, totally crazy, short-sheeting, and endless nights of Taboo! Carly, you've been a great Drum Major! I'll miss you both so much!

Love always,
Alise

Jumpers... Again, all the late nights have paid off - your energy, passion, dedication, and creativity has made something great. This book truly highlights each of your individual talents and perspectives. I am proud to be associated with it despite the fact that none of you ever listen to me). Take care, each of you, and come back to visit.

Mr. F

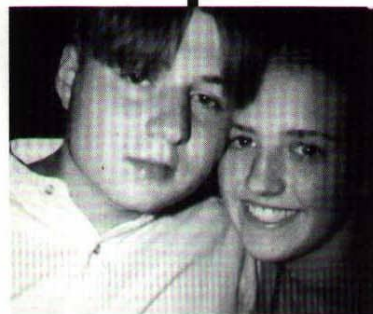

Katie~ Even though we have had our ups and downs, we have managed to survive it all. Have a great senior year. Keep away from Jungle Lip and Sea-Bass. Keep lovin' B.R. & I will keep lovin' T.L.

'99 rules! Love ya,
Jenn Baby

P.S. Never forget the words of Matt "Hi Rocky!"

Stevie Ray~
What to say, except that friends like you are hard to come by. So much of the person I am today is because of you. We have shared some crazy memories: 10:14, J, JJ, and JJJ, the bathroom, voo-doo dolls, a certain bet and so much more. You're the best friend a person could ever have! I love you!
Briar (A.K.A. Big Guy)

Bear~ For the laughs, the tears, and the tournaments, thank you. I am so proud of you for overcoming last year's problems. I am going to miss you so much. Remember- Woodbine, Pennsylvania, the chalet, hula skirts, and snuggling. I love you and send that love to Mesa with you.

Love,
Der (Bear)

To the awesome newspaper staff: We want you to know that all of you are great! We will never forget the couch craziness, parties, and the infamous finger! Good luck in all of your endeavors and keep the paper as cool as it was in 1999!

Love,

The newspaper seniors

P.S. Don't forget the cheesy pizza and 98°!

J-Dawg~Well, we finally made it! To think that we hated each other not so long ago. Always remember the fun, Prom, the Prom fund, our daily stops, Pete Bull, the poodle skirts, the scary army base, Grease (the best movie). Thanks for all the memories! You're my best buddy! We outta here! Love ya, J-Dawg!

My Guard Girls~

When I think of high school I will always think of you. All of the freezing cold marching shows and the intense winter shows. Remember Red Robin, Florida, movies, D2, Pomona show tradition, rainy rehearsals, dance, drum show, 1st place. We have been through it all and you are my second family. Shorty, last to first?

Love,

Rach

Jackie Campbell~ Always helping others. Now that I'm not scared of you anymore I've gained a great friendship. You've made these two years interesting and exciting. Remember the craziness in Missouri and McDonald's after Dorene's party! What am I supposed to do without you? Words can't describe how much I admire you. Thanks for everything.

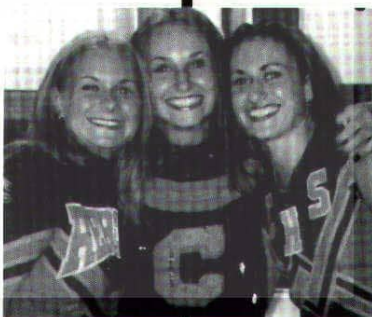

Love,

Kim

Benny~ Who would have thought borrowing Ferris Bueller and watching the Karate Kid would end up making two people so happy. You'll always be my all-star. Don't forget I'm the Queen, I just let you win. I love you baby and I hope with everything I do, you will be by my side. I love you forever.

XOXO K

Kimmy and Meg. To Herbie, Hooters, belly rings, broken hearts, Boulder, a non-cheerleader, and my "sister." It takes a lot of understanding, time, and trust to gain close friendships. As I approach a time of complete uncertainty in my life, my friends are most precious to me. You've left an impression on my heart! Thanks for everything!

Love, Tay

To our guys: Wish we could have spent more time together this year because nothing compares to the memories we made our Junior year. We will always remember Sweethearts, camping, shaving cream/markers, Bear Creek parties, skipping down streets, and New Years 1998. We hope you have success in all you do! We love you guys! Always, Kimmy, Kate, and Meg

To: Hugo Boss, Colin, Scary thing, Daria, psychic healer, Broadway, my belle, Jessica, turning princess, Flower chick: PB's Heritage Square, camp, is that real hair?, glitter makeup, soccer war, B7 and still, LISA's, gummy bears, where's the music? poop city, rage, love the leather, another inspiring performance! Nuts and Bolts, Nuts and Bolts, we got ...! We love you! Love, Captains

Amigas, etc...at heart
we will always be three.
You guys are the best Amigas...from dancing on the roof to 98 heartbreaks, we all stuck together. I will love you chicas forever. SMILE

Always,
Karly

What time it is? I wonder if she forgot! I hate your stupid ski and your stupid twin too! Dost thou have a stick up thy butt?
Where does it go? Occupied, occupied, occupied! Who the heck is in the bathroom this time of night? Alex, you are one of my best friends, and I love you to death! I wish you luck in college!
And you better always remember "mustard alga" because if not, you're grounded! Go class of '99!
Love always,
Mercedes (Tito)

Shneamers, Knudsen, & Twisselman~You three have been my only true friends, my confidants. You have let me grow, let me learn, and have guided me through my mistakes. I'll never forget all of the fun we have had. I have chosen a new path, and I know you will be there with me.
Thank you. Now it's my turn to say goodbye.
Love always,
Tina

Hey Ems~ Words cannot even begin to express how important you are, my best friend. I feel like I have known you my entire life, even though it has been only short of four years. I am sure glad I had TJ Freshman year and decided to sit next to you and take a chance getting to know the new girl. Remember Mustard, Ketchup, and Relish? What about "You're makin' it stupid!" Gillrush as our language! China adventures.
Spain excursions, and "I have two words for you! Blockbuster Music. Or is that three?" I love U and I will miss U!!
Love always,
Case

Sean~My little brother! You have been so supportive of everything that I have done!
You are the greatest! Thanks for always listening to me. I do not know what I would have done sometimes without your shoulder to cry on! I love you so much, and I am grateful to have a brother who I can also call me friend.
Love,
Janelle

To my Boortzy~ I will miss you bunches next year!
Always remember our Chili's special, Poof at Ruby's, Baja Burn Breaks, Camping Jumbalaya, a crppy day at Water World, and woes of wimps. Please remember that I'll always support you, no matter what! Our trio of three, you, J.J., and me will always be together.
I luv ya!
"K"

Logan~You are the best brother I could have.
Thank you for always being there for me. If you weren't here, I don't know what or where I'd be. I'm going to miss you when you're in college, except that you won't be able to scare away any more guys. I love you.
Love,
Hillary

Rachel the Rah Rah~
Thanks for being here for us all these years. These past two years you've been captain have been awesome. You've put up with all our cr-- and managed to be our mother and friend at the same time. We all look up to you. What will we ever do without you!
We love you.
The Guard

My Erin~How do I ever explain to you how much our friendship means to me? Thank God to those older guys who brought us together. Memories of skiing will be forever embedded in my head: the dream date, gondola, ptarmigan lodge, and Hard Rock Cafe. CSU is going to be so fun
I love you,
Your J.J.

To my melophone sistas~ I love you guys
You are the best and you have to keep on rocking while I'm gone. Don't forget all the great times we had and I wish you the best of luck in the future. Thanks for all the great memories and I'll be back to regulate next year.
Your master,
Brett O' Neill

Mike and Eddie~ The three amigos. Mike: 6th grade BYB started it all, Baseball did not work out; good luck to you, best friends, I will do it, if you do it, dorm floor. Ed~Mike went to Chicago, the ladies man, CU, all day BBQ, OEAJ, Susan, soccer, World Cup, Halloween 97, senior trip, backyard camping, Alpine skiing.

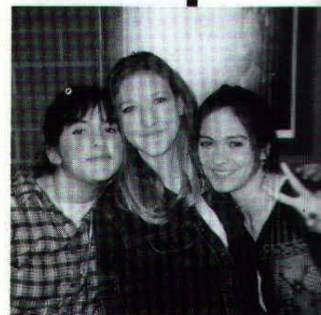

Kimmy Girl~We have had some pretty crazy times together. I'll never forget our walks to the tunnels, the attacking tree, and especially dress-up. Remember the time we were hanging out having a Wedgie War and Bre accidentally ripped my panties. These times I'll never forget.
Love,
Holly-Doll

Keith~ Mrs. Who?! Don't you just hate...getting followed from the front, freakin' morons, Rsia, grinding (wait, with who?), bad guys, bad guns, & N'Sync!! Don't you just love...Colorado Springs, "Hey Mr. Deadmarsh!", mercenaries, France (for meetings and travel), & cr--! You know, I'm beginning to think you're really funny! "I'm an M.D., I have proof!"
Love,
Robert

My girls, my best friends:
Charise~You're my trooper, You'd walk ten miles in the rain for a friend. I love you so much for that. Stay strong.
Jess~my sista, hang in there girl. God is there. Lean into Him. I love you Tender-heart bear. May God send a thousand angels to watch over both of you.
Love,
Sarah

Amy~How is your tooth? Was that not a fun Christmas break? Does your car still smell like guacamole? cheese? Do not worry, the dadsters are going down, just keep that gallon of water in your car and we will take a trip to Starbucks! We have to beat the Nintendo game, the controllers are wearing out!
Yo quiero Taco Bell!
Stef

Nate~My big brother! I'm going to miss you more than anything. You are my second half, my twin, my best friend, and my idol. Your smile, love, and respect has brought me through the toughest of times and will take you far. Always follow your dreams. Thanks for always being by my side.
I love you,
J.J.

Shell~ never forget Washington, Lean on me, would you like some bluman water?...

Jer~ always remember night games, creek, rollerblading, star search, Vail...

Rach~ Real World, pigtails, Homecoming - look guys, I have cleavage! Why so many marshmal-lows?!?...

Thanks for everything! Hey - guess what...there is so much more to come!

I love you guys, Krissa.

for everything this year and in the past. You guys mean so much to me, and I'll miss you so much next year-we'll have to be sure to keep in touch (but if I look under my bed and...).
Always remember campaigners and that we're all here for each other. Look to the Lord and find strength in him-he's always there.
Love, Heido

Karly & Britt~We've done everything from searching your house with butcher knives, falling off the ski lift, dancing on the roof, laughing, crying, and making tons of awesome memories.
You've helped me so much,
our friendship means so much to me. Always remember
"everything's gonna be all right," and long live the three amigos.

Love,
Diana

My Kelly~ Ferris Bueller. Now we're even.
You have something in your teeth. NAVE. It's the bomb! Karate Kid. You got hit with a rock? There are a lot of people, but none of them are Kelly. I'd do anything for you, and even all of the stars together don't equal how much I love you.
Benny

To the 1998-1999 Pom Squad~I love you girls so much! No matter what the scores say from state, we were awesome! I cannot wait for nationals, I know that this is a squad who can do it! You all are like sisters to me, and I am gonna miss you all so much. Thank you so much for this year!

Love,
Janelle

To-Zack (Bear), Linds
(Purr), Nick (Jeweler), Sarah (Zaney), Dylan (Quacker), Joe (Jawz), Brooksie (and Sabrina), Al (hello again),
Andrew (captain), Sarah (punker), Phish (and Jessie),
Sean (Tiger) and...Venessa, Andy, Alex, Steph, Mary,
Marla, Christine, Christina, Kelly, and everyone on the forensics/debate team. You are all so great - I will miss you seniors!
Love, Dev

Andrew and Scott~ What time are we watching Scream? Here's to limos, Prom dinners, being money,
Andrew's Blue bets, colorful sweaters (Scott~they're awesome!), chicken wings and whatever else we've been through. Thanks for being there for me these past four years. I'll miss the constant laughter next year.
And Andrew, I'll page you!

Steve

James~Thanks for bringing out the homie in me. We've had some crazy times.
Our good pal McCormick.
sunroof driving, garage
hopping, rubber nipples.
Loy Vaught. Hans.
pimpin'. pototys. I couldn't imagine having a better friend.
Derek

Bean, Pope, Ed-O, Paav~
Don't forget the best 48 hours last summer and the drive on J-25. Pope and Ed-O have a hell of a time in Boulder. Bean and Paav, we're going to have a hell of a time together next year. Rookie, take care of Conno and the Deputy next year. We've had great memories together and it's almost time to say goodbye.

I love you boys,
The Baliff

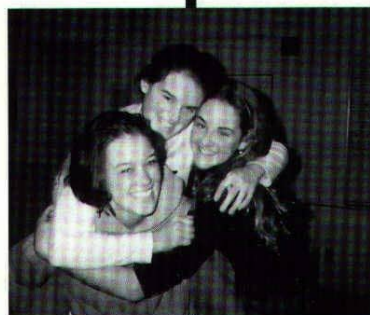

Veronica~
I am so happy that we have been able to spend such a large part of our life being friends.
You have been my best friend for years. Remember all the fun we had on the rocks in front of your house! Do you remember Straight up now tell me? I love you and all the memories.

Love,
Kimmie

Ali~Hey girl! When I think of our friendship it makes me laugh! We have fun times when we are together, New Mexico (twice-la oficina), sneaking out for cake mix, all night Donkey Kong fests, scary movies, spying on Chris
b-day party, skiing, campouts (uh-oh Cody!) Just a few of the memories made forever.

Love always,
Laurel

My Sarah and my Sara~How blessed I feel to have you both as such wonderful friends. Our lunches, our laughs, our performances, mistakes, scrapes, and bruises, heartache and joy have made this year so very lovely. The love of our friendship shall always fill my heart, and its music shall always fill my ears.
With all my love and support
Linda

Shams~ We made it Beatrice!
We have had so many memories together and I have cherished them all. I'll never forget Wadsworth, eating,
B.B., J.S., eating, biking, Navajo, eating, eating, Total's bathroom, eating, Pueblo-accident prone, what? Oh, did I mention eating? Thanks for always being there-you've been the best friend. I love you!

Love always,
Kayko

I thank everyone I met this year for making it a great, interesting year for me. I learned a lot about Americans, Broncos, and fast food. I thank God for giving me a family over here so that I wouldn't be alone - thanks to sister AnaJulia, the Aldriches, and everyone who cared about me

Mama, Papa,
Simon-I love you!
Miriam, Germany

Hey, Bro! Well, here I go, off to yet another school, and so I leave you to be the eldest Vandamme at CHS. I shall miss you, you crazy clown, but will always have you in my heart. So here is to wrestling, imitations I cannot quite get right, speeding home, CHS parking, Adam Sandler, after-dinner energy and being your poudy.

Love,
Me

Eric~ It is a very rare occurrence for a friendship to become a relationship, and it is even more rare when that relationship is as giving as our
is. I love the challenge and fun that you put me through, and I love daily finding out how opposite we truly are. I can only hope our friendship continues and keeps its quirks.
Yours truly,
Krista
P.S. "Do you know what I like about my dog?"

freshman year we have been friends, and you still cannot get rid of me. Nothing will come between us. Not even college or anything else (replacements). So many memories and more to come! I wish you the best of luck in the future. I may be far, but I will always be here. Thank you for the memories, the laughter, the late nights, but most of all thanks for the friendship!

With love, Leticia

ographers: You guys (and girls) made this job possible. It's easy to see by the photobys that this book is not my property: you were ALL the talent. CC: nice flash AB: you kept me sane AD: "I have to work!" AW: so THAT'S how you push film RW: whoa, more cheers! JW: How many rolls? TH: inverse prints! CR: when did you get that camera?

Ali-Pooh! You made this year awesome. Managing was killer! Loved all the dances and guys (10&14). Who could forget, well you know who? One day I'll be over him! I'll always be your sweet baboo. How am I going to survive the hork without you? You are a strong and beautiful woman. Baby, I think I love you.
Megi-Pooh

Friesen,
Well, it's been another year and we're finally done, thanks to you. We're glad to know which Christmas carols are the same song and any other tidbits of information you offered. Sorry about the "language." You're welcome for occupying your time so that you aren't sitting at home alphabetizing your cereal all the time. Thanks again. Your Happy Little Campers. P.S. "We're not laughing with you, we're laughing at you"

Jess~
Can you finally believe we are finally done? It has been so much fun! We have been through lots together. I will never forget playing b-ball, Clement Park, Air-it-Out tournament or the day we met in 8th grade. No matter what has happened we have stuck by each other. Thanks for everything! I love you!
Love always,
Lins

Kate & Mur~
You've made this year great! MMHH, Spice Girls, Vanilla Ice. We learned never to party before a basketball game. People never say, "Up against the wall!" Believe me, Kate, be careful in Steamboat. It's 25 not 45. Mur, never pull the dog's tail. Everything was a blast. I love you guys!
Hooche

Kate~
Hey Ked! We've had some fun times together and I know that you remember every one of them. I know things can't be the way they used to be but we can still keep in touch. You're my best friend and oh yeah, the coolest girl I've ever met!
Love ya always,
Rach

Bye!
I am leaving. Thank you everybody for everything. Now I love snow, pizza, CHS, and Colorado.
See you in Ecuador!
Ana Julia/Annie/Ana or A.J.

The boys~
 Pope and Gak-Bean, Knape, Moprem (the Rock), Cono, Jay, Deputy, Myers, Doogie, Flea, SoCo University, Mo's house,
 Ben's basement, Madden, Bond, camping, Will's house, BYB, football games, only 5 ended up with 8, yield signs, the stripper, Dept whip cream, fire, spray can,
 bebe gun, McCormick's!, y-ball, Knaper record time to Ed's, concerts.
 Thanks,
 Pope

Scott~So many fond memories will always remain in my heart! You are ever so special and wonderful to me and I will always treasure our friendship. When there was "no day, but today!" we made the most of it, and somewhere that "candle" is burning. Scott, you make my heart happy...
 Linda

Jessica Bess~Memories! I can only associate with you: Labrynith, tennis (refrigerator water), Winter Park, and the New Radicals!!

Kel~You are a great Judy
 Buddy, I will never forget Winter Park. Good luck in school! Ivy League. Star gazing - what can I say?
 Laurel~Maxwells sweater, the Italian Stallion, Why am I always on the outside?
 Shooting stars~ enough said.

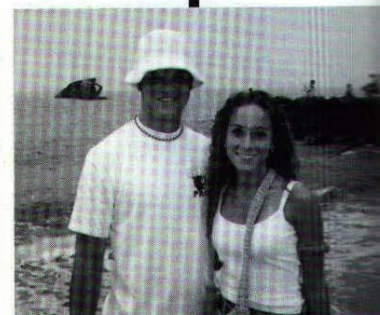

Amanda, Scott, and the Hanceys~Hey swing crew! I love you all and I will miss you next year! The ceiling will never be the same. Remember Kimberly's
 S&B? R.T.C., Hard Rock, Marlow's, Incognito, pizza anyone?, Jeep man, pound cake, Josephina's, SCHLAGSAHNE! Swingset, coathanger, smurfmobile, backseat driving! You all touch my heart!
 K.F.C.

Shelby & Weaver~
 We have a lot of memories...wee-wee, rides home, CCB papers, soccer sit-ups, state finals (girls & boys), Red Robin, MD-pinky, Elitches, Shelby's party, and the list goes on. I love you both like sisters and I hope we will be friends forever.
 Angie

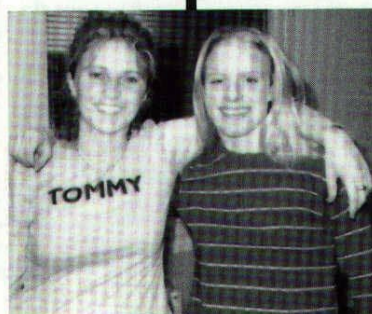

Caitlin~Where to begin - Arizona, New Jersey, my cabin, and Red Rocks. All such great memories which I'll never forget. You were my first true girlfriend and there couldn't be anyone any more perfect than
 you. You were always there;
 whether I was calling you at 5 a.m. or sneaking through your window at 3 a.m. Your support-football and basketball. I'll always remember you and always love you.
 Landon

Hey Miriam! Thank you for being the best small sister ever! Blinking eyes, pretty sausages, cowboy hats, and long nights are some memories that will always be on my mind. This is my Kurbis!
 Ha?
 Ana Julia...Have you seen...

-Lovely Lady Laurie-
 We have had so many great times together:
 from anorexia to obesity, Wadsworth, stalking, Navajo, and the trip from hell, slave girl, the T.T.T. taxi, look at me cheek, sho-sho, and the arms of the angel. These are memories I will always cherish, and look back upon and laugh. You're my bestest friend in the whole world.
 Love always,
 Pretty Princess Patrice

We have had a lot of fun these last four years. It went by so fast. I will always remember all of the fun times. We have had a lot of great memories. Hopefully, we will have more to come. I will miss you guys. Good luck with everything you do. I love you!
Love always,
Lindsay

Yo! Land of the Dragons! They kicked us out. Montu man: "Uh, the seat's a little slimy." The stretchy shirt! Lizards? Pee Shy and Sky Mall! "Oh, poor skinny boy! I'll take the rapists 4000." Dilliot Elliot! "Don't die... I'll be right here..." Chinese Fire drills-Ha! "73 days till my birthday!" Alameda shirt boy. Good times with egg nog. Thanks for making me laugh so much, it was hard and I needed it. Stay happy and never worry. Oh, and Jake, it was me. Love, Jen

C-O-R-R-J-N-N~
Wow! The stories we've told, the long talks we've shared. Between Jon, Jay, Brett, and Tom x2, the list goes on and on. You will always be with me. Reach for the stars. To boulder and back, soon we'll see the whole world. Keep your dreams in your sight that way they're easier to reach. Muchas Gracias Amiga!
Love,
Ticia

Carly, I definitely won't fit everything in this space. You've been the best friend ever, and I know we'll be friends forever. Thanks for always being there for me. We have so many memories: Little JT, band, Ice Cube, chemistry, track, newspaper. I thank God for you, and I know He had great plans for your life!
Love Always,
Michelle

ina~Buddy, it has been a blast hanging out with you, you made these last 2 years go by so fast. As we continue on with life, I will always remember Broomfield and all of the memories we have shared together. Keep in touch always!
Luv,
Corrin

Ticia~you've made this year go by so fast. I'll be sad to see you leave for college because I'll be losing one of the greatest friends I've ever had. No matter where you go, you'll be successful. Cause that's the kind of person you are. Keep in touch always.
Luv,
Corrin

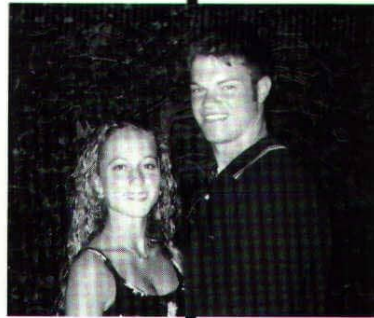

Megi-poo~Driving past people's houses (T.D., J.B., M.E., M.F., D.D., etc.) and trying to find J.C.'s and ARF houses. HA! Dealin' with the horror hork! Crawl in and out of you car's passenger side door! What psychotic maniacs we have been! More to come! You rock! Remember me!
Love,
Ali-Poo

Stinie~I don't know where to start. You're the best sister and friend. I'm amazed by your love for Jesus and by the way you encourage everyone. You believe in me when I don't believe in myself. Save "sister food" while I'm away at college. Let me just say, "We must be sisters!" Stay strong in Jesus.
Love forever,
Mickey

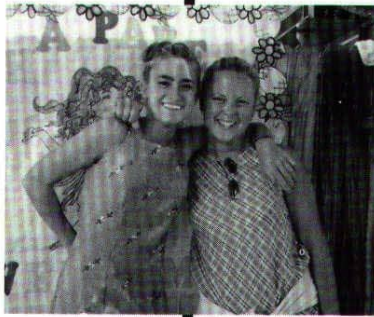

Dressing up was so much fun, or backstage with all those buns. The long car trips in the van, or being Debbie Gibson's fans. All those times in the basement and all those movies we had to rent! You've been the best big (oldest) sister. We loved you so much!
Chris, Mels, and Kays

Landon~From Arizona to New Jersey you have "taken my breath away." Ever since Thanksgiving you have found a way to make every day perfect. We have shared a lot of fun memories that I hope you add to your list of stories. I could never ask for a better best friend. I promise that I will never forget what we have and I know that everything will work out.
I love you,
Caitlin

The locks, Alisa, Fade, Iell, Ia, J, Tree, and E. Remember: Parties every weekend, drive-bys, chasing, Fader tripping over barbed fences, laughing at nothing at all, Bronco-rally, dancing it up at Hollywood, falling at Club USA, losing friends to drugs, shmiemers, aaah-hey!!! We love you all.
Spice it up ladies!
T.

Linz~Thanks for the 16 years of true friendship. We have shared so many memories together that are so special to me. The summer's have been a blast, sharing our secrets, complaining about the people we work with, always being there for each other when we need a hand. I will never forget you. You will always be my best friend.
I wish you the best.
Jaime

Kristi~Well what can I say, but I've enjoyed the past two years going to high school with you. You've been the best sister and friend possible. Even though at times we don't get along we always get over it sooner or later. We've had lots of memories that I'll never forget. For the past 16 years you have been a great role model that I can always look up to and I appreciate all the things you've done for me. Good luck with whatever you decide to do in life. I'll miss you.
Love always,
Kami

Jen~ Buddy! Don't ever forget the memories! Florida Rocks! Washing our feet in the water fountain. "Pretend you're a tree!" What do you mean the train's stuck?!? FREE ORANGES! Talking about shattered glass. "What time is it?" Tab, Tab, Tab. Sixth grade home videos. Super K-Mart at 10pm. Best of luck in the future.
Friends forever,
Michelle & Candy

Emily~
What to say to someone who so quickly became my best friend. Freezing lax practices, I told you you would be varsity!, trying to catch your parents on the ride home, so much for sleeping in the tent, the pretty princess crown, early morning runs. Thanks for all the memories.
Love,
Lindsay

Ang and Heidi~Thanks for all the memories. Cross country, yellow sports bras, thousands, injuries. Track, yuck!! Heidi's prescriptions for those many torturous moments and those wonderful predictions of our futures. But we're not worried. Angela's worried enough for all of us. We love you girls, it just won't be the same without you.
Love,
Lindsay, Crystalann, and Christine

BROTHER that I could have! I am so proud of you for the choices that you have made over the years. I have seen you grow strong and you have taught me so much. I love you and I do not know what I would have done without you!

Always keep your light shining.
Love,
Sara, your sister in Him what I said I would but then I came to my senses and decided not to...and then I thought about composing a long list of comebacks...but then I realized yet again that I can't think of any. So, even though I've changed, I still know what your looks mean even if you don't. Someday I'll have a mirror at the right moment.

The Mighty Hunger

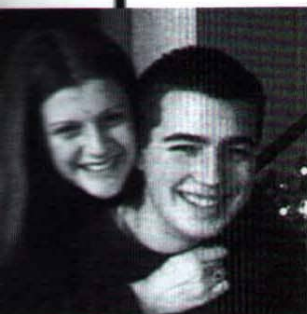

Corrie~Thanks for all the great memories starting in kindergarten! You've always been there for me & I hope we'll continue being great friends throughout life.

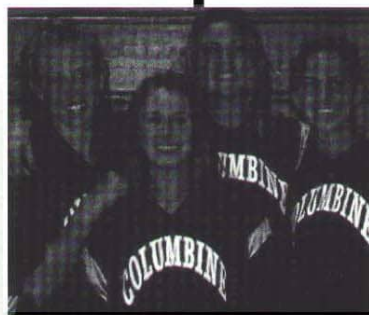

Love,
Lucy (Doodle Bug)
Lucy~Thanks for all those years of memories. You're the type of friend that everyone deserves to have. I know we'll always keep in touch.
Luv,
Corrie (Poodilie Doo)

Matthew~You are my best friend and my one true love. You have always been there for me and for that I thank you. You have given me the confidence, strength of character, and you have brought me so much happiness. I can't begin to tell you what a special person you are to me. Never forget the memories we've shared and always remember I'd do anything just to see you smile. I love you with all of my heart.
Yours,
Liz

Chris~
No matter the situation, you have always been able to make me smile. March 12, 1998, was just the beginning. Wherever you are now and in the future, I hope to always be part of your life. What you feel is what you are, and what you are is beautiful.
I love you,
Sarah

Dear A.K.A-
"If we hold on together, our dreams will never die. Dreams see us through to forever, where clouds roll by...for you and I." All I can say is that I love you guys and thank you for always being by my side. God Bless & I love you all!
Love,
Amber

Lindsay~No matter what has happened I always knew you would be there for me and I hope I have been there for you. You are an awesome person and a great soccer player. Always have confidence in yourself because I sure do.
Good luck in the future.
Love,
Angie

Jer & Ed
It all started when I went to Chicago and hasn't stopped since. We went through a lot of different stages throughout the years. Ed-the competition. Jer-Abolishment of DISC. Ed's the only one that never got whipped. All the different parties at Ed's dad's. I'll see you guys on the dorm floor.
Love you guys.
PAAV

You haters- Hey girls, funny times forever to parties at my house, to just chillin'. I love U! I have been tight with you guys for a long time, so nothing's going to stop. So there you go, laugh forever. Yeah right. Lovers we're outtie. 5,000 for life. Love it, keep it, lock it, PUN it.

Later,
Tade

Mels. I know we don't always get along, but we have a connection, a bond that reaches further than any other. I'm glad we got to be in school together these last two years and that we can sometimes get along. . . I'm looking forward to future years when we can share more than just our clothes. I know we'll be great friends.

Love,
your "big sister," Angela

Later~a toast (over your delicious meal) to our friendship and your left shoulder, dancing and guitars, the Posse, B.A.S.H. days, relationships (none, many, or in between), Blue and its wonderful people, traveling, weddings, frolicking, baseball, Gold, Blue, Concert Choir, the Blues Brothers, the perfect day, and the future.

I love ya!
Linda

Robert, C-, Fantastique homecoming, greatest day EVER!, dancing, the only guys who look DO YOU WANT SOME BREADSTICKS?, the droopy faces, my uniform and your black, P Boden, mercenaries never die..., poems, driving by a certain house, that cow is faster..., cheesecake factory, R---! is that ice cream? Thanks for everything. Keith

Hey friends! I'm so glad I came here from (dare I say it) Cherry Creek. Blue~I love you all! I can't imagine my year without you guys. Thanks to Andres for good times and bad teeth. Here's to you weirdos! Alex, Daps, Greg?, 48 left feet, Craigmeister, you are all so funny and you don't know it! Love you're the man behind the man. Scotlan~The strawberries? Sara Ann's the socks. Anyway...

Love you,
Kim

Girls~ I can't believe our time together is ending. You guys have left me with some good memories. Casa Bonita (The Monterrey House), Tina's birthday in Broomfield, Elaine's, Wild Lights, etc... I love each of you for your individuality, don't ever conform your beliefs and always approach things with an open mind! Love Always, Laurel Alisey, Even though we are leaving, you will not be left behind. Can we say Rap-ture!!! Never forget our memories! FLORIDA, nightvision, 3-D, Grease, Ohh, ohh, ohh, depression parties, ice cream till 2:00, Tahoe, late night talks, turtle fur lives forever! Remember God has great plans for you. We will come see you next year.

Love Always,
Carly and Michelle

Well girls, what can I say? You are not only my best friends, but also serve as my supports. I don't know how I'm going to get along without you! Thank you for always being there for me. For understanding and looking beyond my faults. But most of all thank you for seeing me! Love, Ang.

way down the muddy red trail. It was wonderful. Atop a cliff we stood, the crimson peaks rising up around us- and then Bill and I jumped onto our two pillars of sandstone. It was inspiring. My fingers gripped the wall, muscles pulling me to realize my goal. It was rewarding. Now I see the world from the top of this peak, and I say this is the most awesome of all. Thank you Webb and Friesen, Jenny, Matt and Carly you guys may be stupid, but you're cool. Good luck next year. Partying and scoping out chicks are a must. Cat, thanks for partying with me. Jess, you made work a BLAST, I'll miss ya! Becca (Gloria), skiing was awesome. Case, EMS, & Shorty I love ya! I'll never forget all you guys!! You made my last year unforgettable. Best of luck to all of you. Love always, Alex

First semester lunch buddies and secret Santas, First semester was a blast! Always remember the fun we've had! Teacher impressions, the boy and the forbidden base- "Bees don't have wings!" singing children's songs, Taboo! "Let's go... a horse!" Pictionary adventures and "Hmm, that boy has interesting features." "Let's go presents!!" "You guys are talking out! ADD! ADD!!" ESP! Friends Always, Michelle, Carly, and Jenny

Anne~ Just some things for you to remember: Picnics after dark, alone with Tom and Jerry, filing faces, marshmallow creme, jamming out to Live in your Blazer, your 4th of July party, whip cream fights and many more!

Remember, Friends Forever, through the good times and the bad, through thick and thin we will always be friends forever. Love always, LLLLL

Mich-Babe and Carline- much comrades you have been. Nowhere did I find true friends as you are to me. I blundered and you never got, I fell and you picked me up. In both are my better half, and I see your strength and courage. In both I see a faith that shines bright as the 1,000 fires of Troy. One day that light will shine on me. The laughter and love will fill my ears and fill my heart with happiness for years to come. Stay strong, so strong. From pantry party to train we came... Love J.C.W.

Yearbook,
Who can forget disco dancing in the Pub, Karaoke to KS 107.5 and playing board games. Ultimate frisbee where many of us found out how fat we really were, and crazy dress up day. Have fun and stay in touch!
Rebelations '99

Melissa- 4 years that feel like forever. Perkin's, football, wrestling, running away, smoking, fighting, sex talks, BOYS:

They're all memories I wouldn't trade for the world. We may go separate ways in life, but I'll always be there when you need me. Good luck, I know you can do whatever you put your mind to in the future, whatever it may hold. Love always, Laura P.S. That pie. . .

Anna, It seems like just yesterday we were threatened to be kicked off swim team. I will always remember our Mormon dances and our date nights on Tuesdays to watch Felicity. You will succeed in anything you choose to do. Just don't forget about us little guys.
Love, Courtney
P.S. Watch out for the flying projectiles

Underclass

Hey gang,
This year was by far the BEST!
Whether we were playing Twister or just hanging out, we always managed to have a bundle of laughs!!! Thanks for all of the memories and good times. I will treasure them forever. Remember that friendship and laughter go hand in hand. Do not forget to smile.
Love always,
Big Mouth 1 & Big Mouth 2

Too!- One word, "Stella's." May the DUE be tomorrow. "This is Amy, I will be talking for 5 min..." Taboo, Emmanuelle. Em-Summer, parties, CC, MC, JD, (what?) Gary, the eagle, the mockingsbird, (we are cursed), the ratings, (you remember), craeter face. Beth- The Fight was long & hard, but we pulled through. Herbs to good drinks & good conversations, Guys' night out, click. Aims- Math, the club, Cross country, ("Boulder sucks"), New Years & more. Linds- I wish there was more, (I ready for the elections. Kristi- soccer,
Cross country, 100 classes, Sociology (Yeah, there's memories), Sadies -yeah lifeguarding. To All- Dumb Nights & most of the Week live forever. Never forget.
Love, Amy (the girl with the stick)

Hey chicas,
I must say that we looked the best ever during spirit week.
What can I say? This year has been the funnest and I can't begin to explain how awesome it is that the way bad trio has stuck together since 8th grade.
With all my love and wishes,
Annette

Sean, With everything that's happened, it's hard to believe it's only been a year. You have given me so much and asked for so little in return. All I can say is thank you, my Gilbert.
from the bottom of my heart.
Love, Linds
"My wish is not to be someone to the world, but to be the world to someone"

To the Jello swimmers: Keep Collecting! Kelly: to my bud for a thousand years:
remember to keep looking up!
As always anthems and roller coasters are our things.
Melissa: Good luck in years to come.
Love you,
Kellye

Steve,
Hey goofball. I'm glad we are such friends. I lur hanging out at the swim meets, you always make them so much fun. I'll always remember our laughs and I'm sure there will be many more to come. We are going ot have another awesome summer. Stay sweet!
Lur your bud, Stacy

Dedications

Dear Sarah & Jessica,
If there is someone that I can trust, talk to, and count on, it's you guys. You both have been there for me and I'll always be there for you. Sarah, I remember the first time I met you. You were so sweet. Jessica, the shy one, I hope you enjoy the rest of high school.
Love ya,
Charise

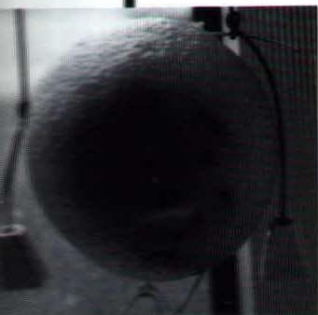

To all my friends:
We have so many memories in the little time we have been friends. It is really hard to write them all down in 60 words. The things that I can't imaging doing without is sleepovers, padsters, water fights at Starbucks, and Taco Bell. I will miss you all.
Love your loving mother,
Amy

Christine- Is it wrong of me? Finally on stage with me you wandering strumpet (PC). I have had a blast during every moment, from road trips to Zuka to our outstanding make-up jobs. I have always been the fool, but we have laughed together. Thanks for the memories and I hope that they will always continue.
Love, Sarah

Ode to Tamara
"I can't believe that your silverware drawer is unorganized!"
"They smell like dead carcasses."
"You have a lot of long dogs!"
"I lost my pen from my pocketknife."
"Can I get expelled for this?"
Never forget us,
Lorraine and Shaniqua

Hey, Becky!
I told you I could get this photo in the Yearbook! HA!!
Travis

Annette Shinn,
I think that we have been friends for a very long time. I missed you this year around soccer time. We have so many memories. Remember when we were bullies when we were little & then I got kicked out of Eskimo. Remember Tempe & the ride there. I'm excited for the Eskimo reunion! "Why??*#!?" Hawaii was great.
Friends Forever,
Love, Amy Bierbach

Inspiration

"Do what you can, with what you have, where you are." -Theodore Roosevelt "Those who live are those who fight." -Victor Hugo "Nothing in the world can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men of talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination

In the News

President Bill Clinton was impeached by the House but was not convicted in the Senate. John Glenn, the first American in space, also became the oldest man in space on a return trip at age 72. The United States began air raids in Iraq and Kosovo. Hurricane Mitch destroyed Honduras. Viagra (a male function enhancer) was invented. King Hussain, King of Jordan, died. Bill Owens became Colorado's new governor. Dr.

Bertrand Piccard and Brian Jones became the first people ever to circumnavigate the world in a hot air balloon. It was discovered that some Olympic Committee Members had been accepting bribes. European Union members agreed on a standard currency called the Euro which is to be introduced in a couple of years. The men responsible for the brutal death of James Byrd were convicted in Texas.

Colophon: 1,750 copies of Rebelations Vol. 26 were printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks in Logan, Utah with the help of Herff Jones representative Jim "The Hook-up" Herbertson and Publications advisor Eric "What are those, puppies?" Friesen. Programs used were Adobe Pagemaker 6.52, Photoshop 5.0 and Illustrator 7.0. All pages and camera-ready layouts created on Macintosh network computers. 100-pound Bordeaux paper used for all pages. 117 pages of full color, 14 pages of spot color. Cover: Envisioned by all editors, created by Matt Friedman. Silkscreen with 3 applied colors and custom die cut to accommodate photo of each individual showing through. All body copy, folios and captions in Utopia. Cover, opening, index and division pages in Fragile. Endsheets: Envisioned by a purple monkey, six stressed out editors and one freak, created by Matt Friedman. Designed with black ink only with photos of all students provided by the Picture Lady on CD. Title Page: Layout by Heidi "The Fear" Munger, photos by Chris Clary, Ryan Walda, Angela "Surf's up!" Poleschook and Dave Proctor. Opening/Closing: Layout by Dave Proctor and Matt Friedman, copy by all editors. Division Pages: layout by Dave "Let me tell you about double-butt carbon fiber..." Proctor Student Life: Responsibility and Thrillseeking layouts by Matt "Brass Monkey" Friedman, Time and Homecoming layouts by Heidi Munger, Outlets layout by Amy "Who needs the faculty section?" Bierbach, Interaction layout by Jessica "Lackadaisical" Palin and Style layout by Casey "Facetious" Stoner. Headlines in Gilligan's Island Academics: layouts by Casey Stoner, spiral by Kristin Brown. Headlines in Nuptial Script. Seniors: Layouts by Jessica Palin, headlines in Papyrus ICG People: Layouts by Amy Bierbach, headline and subhead in Myriad Tilt. Organizations: layouts by Angela Poleschook and Casey Stoner, accents and subhead in Tekton MM, headline in Utopia. Sports: layouts by Heidi Munger, Headlines in Impact, subhead in Utopia Semibold. Senior Index: layouts by Jessica Palin and Matt Friedman, names in papyrus ICG. Compiled by Jessica Palin and Katie Sullivan. Dedications: Compiled by Amy Bierbach and Casey Stoner. Ads: Compiled by Kellye Cruz. Index and Poison List: Courtney Shakowski, Annette Shinn and Amy Bierbach. Phil: Photos by David Proctor, Travis Hill Photography: Thanks to Moto Photo and Englewood Camera for developing approximately 300 rolls of Fuji Superia and making approximately 7,200 prints (before enlargements and reductions). Special thanks to Mona Madden and Darlene Mesch in the financial office, Tamara Rummer and Shirley Pierce in the attendance office, the custodial staff, RNN for all of our time couch hunting, Johnny Marco for inspiration, caffeine, John Elway for using the "It's About" in his ad campaign months after we had come up with the theme, Mrs. Hirokawa, Mr. Datz, and...

HERFF JONES®
RECOGNITION • EDUCATION • MOTIVATION

At Herff Jones, we don't rely on a single production method to create your yearbook. Our unique multitrack production system provides flexibility and proven reliability to produce the best yearbook possible, delivered on time. We carefully examine each of your photos and pages, and then determine the production track that will generate the highest quality results.

Will our system work for you? Judge us by the company we keep. Herff Jones consistently produces more award winning yearbooks than any other yearbook company. In the past three judging years, yearbooks printed by Herff Jones received the following awards: CSPA-38 Gold Crowns and 32 Silver Crowns; and at JEA/NSPA 24 Pace-makers.

This past year Herff Jones printed over 52 percent of CHSPA award winning books, more than any other company in the state.

For more information about Herff Jones and our product offerings, please contact your Herff Jones Sales Representative, Jim Herbertson at (303) 470-8689.

it was about

it was about that moment you walked down the halls seeing smiling and content faces and wham! The realization hit you (or maybe it was just another student). You're in high school. Though there were bad times, it's the good times that warmed you up and spread a smile across your face. it was about the knowledge you gained, not only in class, but the lessons you learned through your own and others' experiences. Remember this wisdom as you take on the world and refer back to the stage of your life spent at Columbine; the lessons instilled here should not be forgotten. it was about the feeling of accomplishment that warmed your veins. You'd gone the extra mile and reached your goal. it was about pushing through the multitudes of underclassmen gathered in the cafeteria for lunch as you raced to your car to escape for fast food. Face it, we all jumped at the chance to show our seniority. it was about walking into your home an hour past your curfew (uh, oh—did your watch break

Encouraging the fans to join the cheering, Junior Pom Paige Allison shows her spirit as she performs. Many found the Poms fun to have at events because they helped to get the crowd

umphant cross country race. Cross country proved to be a challenge for most runners due to the five kilometer run, but most enjoyed the team-bonding experiences that led

it was about

again?). The punishment for being late: losing the privilege to drive your car for a week and spending it relying on your friends. it was about the experience you gained after four years of making new friends but keeping the old. You doubted some of those friends after you passed out Christmas gifts and never received any back. it was about recovering from the humiliation you felt when you discovered that you were wrong after loudly stating your opinion (you were positive that the paper was due on Wednesday) and the apology that followed to the students who trusted your information. it was about the crush of your high school life finally realizing your name and saying "hello" in passing period, making your heart skip a beat and palms sweat. it was about realizing that high school is not the end of part of your life but actually a continuation. Your years here have helped to prepare you for the rest of your life. it was about expression, discipline, experience, spirit, dedication, guts, and order.
